THE BATTLE LINE IS DRAWN

By HENRY J. FORD.
(Staff Correspondent.)
[SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE GAZETTE.]

Chicago, June 23.—The end crowned the work today in the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt as the next president of the United States. It was accomplished with enthusiasm, but without the frenzied excitement which the free silver crusade introduced into national convention proceedings. Political madness has disappeared with the dying out of that mania. The country has emerged from the period of hysterical politics. Sane appreciation of public duty and sensible consideration of means have characterized party action. The result has been a convention which will go into history as the most harmonious ever held in the country. There could not be a better augury of success at the polls. A mob will make more noise than an army, but it takes an army to win battles.

Considering the importance of the occasion the Coliseum was slow in filling up this morning. This of itself was a mark of this era of sane politics. Everybody who had a right to a seat knew that that right would be respected and that there would be no lunatic scrambles among scenes of frenzied excitement. There is such an army of convention employes that all entering meet with attention and guidance at every turn, and there was no more difficulty in reaching any one of the thousands of seats than in a well-managed theater.

Hall Filled Rapidly.

By 9:30, half an hour before the hour set for convening, there was but a sprinkling of spectators in the vast expanse of seats. In all the large area of convention seats south of the platform there was only one colored delegate sitting there alone with the air of serious dignity which marks the bearing of all the colored delegates. Soon, however, the hall began to fill rapidly, there being so many entrances that great numbers can enter simultaneously. They came pouring into the various sections like streams into the compartments of an immense reservoir, with so little appearance of special excitement that one might have supposed them early comers to the music hall of the Pittsburgh exposition so as to get good seats for the coming concert. Ladies were numerous and their costumes introduced pleasing touches of color in the prospect.

Gradually the galleries began to assume the appearance of living embankments, the delegates grew into a pattern of orderly tiers, while the great area of floor space outside of the railing became like a living meadow. The hall presented a beautiful appearance. Col. Diehl, assistant general manager of the Associated Press, who has had lots of experience in such matters, says it was the prettiest convention he has ever seen. The cierestory and gallery windows of the hall are a yellow-tinted glass which do not admit shafts of sunshine, but send down a diffused straw-colored light upon the scene, spreading everywhere a soft illumination. The orderliness of the seating arrangements and the distinct definition of the numerous sections made a strikingly symmetrical tableaux.

Applause for Beveridge.

While waiting for the convention proceedings to begin the audience sat listening to the band, occasionally applauding some selection. Old-time favorites were played, such as "Just Before the Battle, Mother," and "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, the Boys Are Marching." While the latter was being played Chauncey Depew made his usual notable entrance. There was less attention paid to the entrance of distinguished delegates than upon previous days. It seemed to be recognized that the previous sessions had been but the overture and the prelude to the great drama now to be enacted and the play itself rather than the individual performers now claimed attention. There was, however, a flurry of applause when Senator Beveridge came in. He came over to the Pennsylvania section and conferred with Gov. Pennypacker, clasping the governor by the arm as he talked, while the governor held fast to one of the few plug hats to be seen in the convention. A few minutes later the band began playing "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," and as the notes of the national anthem were heard the vast audience impulsively rose to its feet, flourishing handkerchiefs and waving flags.

At 10:15 Speaker Cannon appeared upon the stand and at once the audience sprang up and began cheering "Uncle Joe," while the band played "Yankee Doodle." A big bouquet of roses and lilies were presented to him, but he found them in his way and they soon retired to the side scenes. While the applause over this incident was still going on the six Alaska delegates entered with their totem poles surmounted by large stuffed eagles. The spectacle harmonized with the mood of the audience and loud cheers rang through the hall. The eagles were carried through the hall in a triumphal march and one of them remained permanently with the New York delegation.

While these scenes were taking place the audience missed the entrance of a man who next to the nominees will be

By L. W. STRAYER.

Chicago, June 23.—When the Republican national convention came to the nomination of a candidate for vice president, all opposition disappeared and Senator Charles Warren Fairbanks of Indiana, was selected unanimously without the call of the roll. Men who had for days been criticising the Indiana man for his policy of silence, and who had insisted that he should have announced his candi[dacy] today leaped upon [the] for Fairbanks.

With the ann[ounce]drawal of Hitt of [Illinois] was known that the[re] sition to the Indiana [man] ago it had been report[ed] any opposition in the co[n]Fairbanks would not perm[it] be considered, but since [the] assembled here that idea wa[s] and it became known that wh[en] diana man would make no effe[ct] cure the nomination, he would a[ccept] if offered him. Today it was offered and in a manner that no man could consider otherwise than highly gratifying.

It was 1:20 p. m. when Chairman Cannon announced that nominations for a vice presidential candidate were in order. When Alabama was called, the chairman of that delegation yielded the floor to the state of Iowa. At this, Senator J. P. Dolliver, of Iowa, walked to the stage to present the name of Charles W. Fairbanks. He made a brief speech, but one highly eulogistic of Senator Fairbanks to whom he referred to as a statesman and leader of the Republican party.

Indiana Led Demonstration.

As he closed, the Indiana delegation led in the demonstration that greeted the mention of Fairbanks name. Senator Beveridge, who was acting as chairman of the delegation, grabbed a flag and hopped upon the chair as he let out some yells that were really a breach of strict senatorial dignity. The other delegates were in good voice and the Coliseum resounded with cheers for Fairbanks. If there had been any idea up to that time of putting up opposition to Fairbanks, it was dispelled by this outbreak, which was really a surprise in view of the silent policy of the senator. It was easily seen that there was room in the convention for no other vice presidential candidate.

Senator Chauncey M. Depew, of New York, was introduced as "Not senator" but Chauncey Depew. He was accorded a very hearty greeting by the delegates and when the noise had subsided he drew a contrast between this convention and that which is to assemble in St. Louis on July 6. He said that in the latter gathering some of the delegates would be yelling "Be sane" while those on the other side of the partition would cry "Re Democrats."

He regarded this one an epoch-making convention because it marked the fiftieth anniversary of the Republican party. Speaking of the great export of our manufactures he said that the tourist now crosses the Nile on a bridge made in Pittsburgh.

Importance of Vice Presidency.

"It seems that we have not given enough importance to the office of vice president," said he. "Ridicule and caricature have placed the office almost in contempt. We should remember that it is a place of influence and importance and has been filled by such men as Jefferson, John Adams and Calhoun."

Referring to the fitness of Senator Fairbanks for the place he said:

"Everybody knows that if the towering figure of Theodore Roosevelt had been out of this canvass, one of the foremost candidates for the presidency would have been Charles W. Fairbanks of Indiana."

As Senator Depew closed there was another outburst of cheering led by Senator Beveridge.

Senator Foraker, of Ohio, said that the convention had gathered here for three things, to adopt a platform, to nominate a candidate for the presidency and to nominate one for the vice presidency. "Two of these things," said he, "we have done and done well. We propose now to do the other and do it equally well. Of all the platforms that we have made in the history of the party there is not one which we would now strike from the records if we could."

He referred to the qualifications of Senator Fairbanks for the place and seconded his nomination.

Address by Pennypacker.

Gov. S. W. Pennypacker, of Pennsylvania, made a brief address seconding the nomination of Senator Fairbanks. He was followed by ex-Senator Carter of Montana who made a short but rousing address. This being all of the seconding speeches scheduled, Chairman Cannon asked:

"Are there any other nominations for vice president?"

"No, no; Fairbanks, Fairbanks," yelled delegates in all parts of the hall.

Senator Cullom stated that Illinois had had a candidate for the vice presidency in the person of Representative R. R. Hitt, of that state, but Mr. Hitt, he said, had wired him from Washington instructing him not to present his name to the convention. Therefore, the Illinois delegation would vote for Senator Fairbanks. This was the signal for Nebraska to

ENTHUSIASM OF DELEGATION

By WALTER J. CHRISTY.

[SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE GAZETTE.]

Chicago, June 23.—Pennsylvania is well pleased with the standard bearers selected by today's convention. Chairman Penrose believes that with men like Roosevelt and Fairbanks heading the ticket, the Keystone commonwealth can be counted upon for a majority mounting into the hundreds of thousands.

Appreciation of the nominations was shown by the delegation. There was no state, not even New York and Indiana, the homes of the nominees, that entered more heartily into the enthusiastic reception tendered the candidates when they were named than did Pennsylvania. The 68 delegates cheered lustily for the standard bearers and the Keystone marker was early to find place in the parade of the states.

Pennsylvania had an important part in the proceedings of the day. The honor of seconding the nomination of Senator Fairbanks was conferred upon Gov. Samuel W. Pennypacker. The chief executive of the second commonwealth of the Union was given a hearty welcome by the 10,000 people that thronged the hall.

As Gov. Pennypacker was led to the center of the stage by Chairman Cannon, the Pennsylvania delegates stood on their chairs and gave three cheers for their executive. The great audience took up the cry and for several minutes the ovation continued. In introducing the governor, Chairman Cannon said:

President Roosevelt had just finished luncheon and was sitting with his family on the south portico of the White House shortly after 2 o'clock this afternoon when he received the first news of his nomination by acclamation at Chicago. It was brought to him by his secretary, Mr. Loeb, in a bulletin which had been received at the executive offices.

Mrs. Roosevelt was the first to congratulate him and Miss Alice Roosevelt next. Then Miss Carow extended her felicitations, and was followed by the younger members of the family. Four Months Ago He Met His Indiana Friends in Secret Conference.

QUIET SESSION AT LINCOLN

The real beginning of the boom that led to the nomination yesterday of Senator Fairbanks as the vice presidential candidate of the Republican party was made in Pittsburgh four months ago.

The conference after which he decided that he would be a candidate for the nomination was held at the Hotel Lincoln in much secrecy. Senator Fairbanks arrived at the Lincoln on the morning of Sunday, February 28, coming from Washington and was joined there shortly afterward by six leading Republicans of Indiana. None of the party registered, but a suite of rooms on the sixth floor of the hotel was engaged and in those rooms the entire party was cloistered until the time of the departure of the night trains.

It was at this meeting that his friends persuaded Senator Fairbanks to allow his name to be used and convinced him that he could have the nomination.

Talked With Close Friends

In the party that met him were Congressman James A. Hemenway and Jesse Overstreet, Frank Henley, Mr. Fairbanks' political manager; the United States district attorney at Indianapolis, an Indianapolis banker and a newspaper man of LaFayette, Ind.

The secrecy of the meeting came near to being broken at one time, when Clarence Ullery, clerk at the Lincoln, recognized the various members of the party. Mr. Ullery was formerly clerk at the Indianapolis club, and there had become acquainted with the prominent men of that city and of Indiana generally. Frank A. Brobst, proprietor of the Lincoln, also spoke to the senator, who tried for a moment to conceal his identity, but gave up that idea and merely cautioned Mr.

Chicago, June 23.—"From the bottom of my heart I want to thank you and Pennsylvania for what you have done for me. The influence of Pennsylvania has been most potentially exerted in my interest and as its representative I have called to express to you my deep and profound appreciation of your efforts."

Senator Charles W. Fairbanks, nominee for vice president, spoke the above words as he clasped the hand of Senator Penrose in the latter's apartments in the Auditorium Annex. Immediately upon the adjournment of the new national committee Senator Penrose returned to the hotel. Senator Fairbanks was one of the first visitors. After chatting a few moments with the Pennsylvania leader, Mr. Fairbanks walked over to Gov. Pennypacker's room and thanked him for the splendid address he had made in seconding his nomination. Speaking of the ticket and the work of the convention Senator Penrose dictated the following:

"The ticket is a strong one and the platform meets all the requirements of the situation. The convention was one of the most harmonious in the history of the party. Pennsylvanians have reason to be pleased with the tariff plank and our state will return its usual vote for presidential year and continue to lead the column of the states in the size of her Republican majority."

National Committee Organizes.

Mr. Penrose will tomorrow attend the meeting of the congressional marine commission. He will also attend the meeting of the commission to be held in Detroit and Cleveland the first of next week and he expects to reach Philadelphia about July 1. The month of July he will probably spend in the Rocky mountains, returning in time to open the state campaign August 1.

The new national committee held a very brief session after the adjournment of the convention. Secretary of Commerce and Labor George B. Cortelyou was elected chairman. Harry S. New, the committeeman from Indiana, was elected vice chairman. Cornelius N. Bliss was re-elected treasurer, and Elmer Dover was re-elected secretary. William J. Stone of Maryland succeeds himself as sergeant-at-arms. A resolution was adopted authorizing Chairman Cortelyou to appoint an executive committee of nine. The personnel of this committee was not announced.

The delegates are rapidly leaving the city. Everyone seems to be entirely satisfied with the convention's work and nowhere is heard a discordant note. There have been conventions which have been more deliriously emotional, more hysterically demonstrative, but none have been more sane in their deliberations, more harmonious in their actions and better satisfied with the result of their labors. Expressions given the writer by members of the delegations from western, southern and eastern states were emphatic in the conclusion that a better ticket could not have been named and that Roosevelt and Fairbanks will sweep the country as did McKinley four years ago.

Expensive for Delegates.

MIKADO'S MEN MARCHING ON

Advance on Senuchen Reported by General Sakharoff.

OUTPOSTS FIGHTING

[ASSOCIATED PRESS CABLE TO THE GAZETTE.]

St. Petersburg, June 23.—The general staff has received the following dispatch from Lieut.-Gen. Sakharoff, under date of June 22:

"At 8 o'clock on the morning of June 21, the Japanese vanguard resumed its advance against our outposts four miles south of Senuchen. The outposts retired slowly towards Senuchen and further on in the direction of Kaichau.

"At noon, a Japanese column consisting of nine squadrons of cavalry, a battery of artillery and a considerable number of infantry were observed advancing in the direction of Senuchen. Other strong columns of the enemy appeared and the Japanese occupied Senuchen toward evening with over a division of infantry, a brigade of cavalry and 32 guns.

"According to information received from our scouts and the inhabitants, the enemy, over a division strong, is concentrated southward of Chapan pass near Chang-Taifien and Long Lia Lien.

"The Japanese did not advance beyond Chapan Pass in the direction of Tanchi and the enemy, on the morning of the 22nd, had not occupied the pass between Paitsiapei and Panchingine on the Siu Yen—Liao-Yang road. No new movement has been noticed there.

Slight Repulse for Japan.

"Our scouts report that a large detachment of all arms advanced from Siu Yen to Khranza on the morning of June 22. A battalion of the enemy taking advantage of a thick fog tried to surprise our vanguard near Vandiapudze on the Siu Yen—Hai Cheng road. A movement was discovered in time and the Japanese received volleys from five companies of Russians. The enemy retired with some losses toward Siu Yen. One Russian sharpshooter was wounded.

"The Japanese occupied Vafangtien, on the main road to Liao-Yang, on the evening of June 19 with a battalion of infantry and a squadron of cavalry. A detachment of the same strength occupied Chandinju, in the valley of the Taso river, seven miles north of Feng-Wang-Cheng."

Japanese Army Advancing.

"Gen. Kuroki's advance from Siu-Yen has been suspended evidently to effect an alignment of the two armies. The strength of the enemy's vanguard is approximately a division and several squadrons of cavalry, and the Siu-Yen force of nine squadrons supported by a strong column of infantry toward the south.

"The enemy's position on June 19 and June 21 extended within seven miles southward to Semuchen along a line from the sea to the mountainous and difficult district east of the railway.

"The enemy's advance lines are being strongly held by cavalry and a screen of infantry. The passes and defiles in the mountains east of the railway are also vigilantly guarded.

"A movement of strong Japanese mounted patrols with infantry supports was noted June 20 from 5 o'clock in the afternoon onward. We had no losses in the firing which ensued while the Japanese had several killed and wounded.

Reinforcements Arriving.

"An increase in the Japanese forces had been noticed south of Vanfiapudze and near the villages of Manziapudze, Takziapudze and Khakahel. Reinforcements are also reaching the Japanese at the farthest point of the road between Siu-Yen and Tanchi via Pelahanjou and Siakhotan.

"The enemy's outposts have occupied the pass between Pangrabel and Pal-Chang on the northern road nine and one-half miles east of Siakhotan, and the Chapan pass, seven and one-half miles south of Siakhotan.

"The Japanese have fortified Kuza-Dian-Sian, mounting 18 guns, with a strong screen.

"The enemy has occupied the village of Sapenhai, 25 miles northeast of Siamatze and is firmly intrenched."

LIAO-YANG, June 22.—(Delayed in Transmission.)—According to reports received at the Russian headquarters the Japanese intend to attack either Kaichau or Tashichau from two sides. Their armies continue to advance from the south and west. The leading detachments of Gen. Oku's army have occupied Semuchen and Japanese scouts have appeared in the vicinity of Kiachau.

Skirmishes Frequent.

Constant skirmishing is in progress between them and the Cossacks who are observing the movements of the enemy. Gen. Kuroki's army has appeared on the road leading westward from Siu-Yen and in the neighboring valleys. The success of the Japanese plan would mean that Korea will lose its value as a base, Niuchwang then being available for this purpose. The movements of the Japanese troops are facilitated by the cessation of the rains and hot weather having set in which has dried the roads.

Another Cossack detachment has fallen into an ambush of Japanese infantry, losing a number of men wounded.

THE BATTLE LINE IS DRAWN

By HENRY J. FORD.

[SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE GAZETTE.]

Chicago, June 23.—The end crowned the work today in the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt as the next president of the United States. It was accomplished with enthusiasm, but without the frenzied excitement which the free silver crusade introduced into national convention proceedings. Political madness has disappeared with the dying out of that mania. The country has emerged from the period of hysterical politics. Sane appreciation of public duty and sensible consideration of means have characterized party action. The result has been a convention which will go into history as the most harmonious ever held in the country. There could not be a better augury of success at the polls. A mob will make more noise than an army, but it takes an army to win battles.

Considering the importance of the occasion the Coliseum was slow in filling up this morning. This of itself was a mark of this era of sane politics. Everybody who had a right to a seat knew that that right would be respected and that there would be no lunatic scrambles among scenes of frenzied excitement. There is such an army of convention employes that all entering meet with attention and guidance at every turn, and there was no more difficulty in reaching any one of the thousands of seats than in a well-managed theater.

Hall Filled Rapidly.

By 9:30, half an hour before the hour set for convening, there was but a sprinkling of spectators in the vast expanse of seats. In all the large area of convention seats south of the platform there was only one colored delegate sitting there alone with the air of serious dignity which marks the bearing of all the colored delegates. Soon, however, the hall began to fill rapidly, there being so many entrances that great numbers can enter simultaneously. They came pouring into the various sections like streams into the compartments of an immense reservoir, with so little appearance of special excitement that one might have supposed them early comers to the music hall of the Pittsburgh exposition so as to get good seats for the coming concert. Ladies were numerous and their costumes introduced pleasing touches of color in the prospect.

Gradually the galleries began to assume the appearance of living embankments, the delegates grew into a pattern of orderly tiers, while the great area of floor space outside of the railing became like a living meadow. The hall presented a beautiful appearance. Col. Diehl, assistant general manager of the Associated Press, who has had lots of experience in such matters, says it was the prettiest convention he has ever seen. The cierestory and gallery windows of the hall are a yellow-tinted glass which do not admit shafts of sunshine, but send down a diffused straw-colored light upon the scene, spreading everywhere a soft illumination. The orderliness of the seating arrangements and the distinct definition of the numerous sections made a strikingly symmetrical tableaux.

Applause for Beveridge.

While waiting for the convention proceedings to begin the audience sat listening to the band, occasionally applauding some selection. Old-time favorites were played, such as "Just Before the Battle, Mother," and "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, the Boys Are Marching." While the latter was being played Chauncey Depew made his usual notable entrance. There was less attention paid to the entrance of distinguished delegates than upon previous days. It seemed to be recognized that the previous sessions had been but the overture and the prelude to the great drama now to be enacted and the play itself rather than the individual performers now claimed attention. There was, however, a flurry of applause when Senator Beveridge came in. He came over to the Pennsylvania section and conferred with Gov. Pennypacker, clasping the governor by the arm as he talked, while the governor held fast to one of the few plug hats to be seen in the convention. A few minutes later the band began playing "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," and as the notes of the national anthem were heard the vast audience impulsively rose to its feet, flourishing handkerchiefs and waving flags.

At 10:15 Speaker Cannon appeared upon the stand and at once the audience sprang up and began cheering "Uncle Joe," while the band played "Yankee Doodle." A big bouquet of roses and lilies were presented to him, but he found them in his way and they soon retired to the side scenes. While the applause over this incident was still going on the six Alaska delegates entered with their totem poles surmounted by large stuffed eagles. The spectacle harmonized with the mood of the audience and loud cheers rang through the hall. The eagles were carried through the hall in a triumphal march and one of them remained permanently with the New York delegation.

While these scenes were taking place the audience missed the entrance of a man who next to the nominees will be

RECEIVES A GRAND OVATION

By L. W. STRAYER.
[SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE GAZETTE.]

Chicago, June 23.—When the Republican national convention came to the nomination of a candidate for vice president, all opposition disappeared and Senator Charles Warren Fairbanks of Indiana, was selected unanimously without the call of the roll. Men who had for days been criticising the Indiana man for his policy of silence, and who had insisted that he should have announced his candidacy, today leaped upon chairs and shouted for Fairbanks.

With the announcement of the withdrawal of Hitt of Illinois, yesterday, it was known that there would be no opposition to the Indiana senator. Some weeks ago it had been reported that if he had any opposition in the convention, Senator Fairbanks would not permit his name to be considered, but since the delegates assembled here that idea was dissipated and it became known that while the Indiana man would make no effort to secure the nomination, he would accept it if offered him. Today it was offered him and in a manner that no man could consider otherwise than highly gratifying.

It was 1:20 p. m. when Chairman Cannon announced that nominations for a vice presidential candidate were in order. When Alabama was called, the chairman of that delegation yielded the floor to the state of Iowa. At this, Senator J. P. Dolliver, of Iowa, walked to the stage to present the name of Charles W. Fairbanks. He made a brief speech, but one highly eulogistic of Senator Fairbanks to whom he referred to as a statesman and leader of the Republican party.

Indiana Led Demonstration.

As he closed, the Indiana delegation led in the demonstration that greeted the mention of Fairbanks name. Senator Beveridge, who was acting as chairman of the delegation, grabbed a flag and hopped upon the chair as he let out some yells that were really a breach of strict senatorial dignity. The other delegates were in good voice and the Coliseum resounded with cheers for Fairbanks. If there had been any idea up to that time of putting up opposition to Fairbanks, it was dispelled by this outbreak, which was really a surprise in view of the silent policy of the senator. It was easily seen that there was room in the convention for no other vice presidential candidate.

Senator Chauncey M. Depew, of New York, was introduced as "Not senator" but Chauncey Depew. He was accorded a very hearty greeting by the delegates and when the noise had subsided he drew a contrast between this convention and that which is to assemble in St. Louis on July 6. He said that in the latter gathering some of the delegates would be yelling "Be sane" while those on the other side of the partition would cry "Be Democrats."

He regarded this one an epoch-making convention because it marked the fiftieth anniversary of the Republican party. Speaking of the great export of our manufactures he said that the tourist now crosses the Nile on a bridge made in Pittsburgh.

Importance of Vice Presidency.

"It seems that we have not given enough importance to the office of vice president," said he. "Ridicule and caricature have placed the office almost in contempt. We should remember that it is a place of influence and importance and has been filled by such men as Jefferson, John Adams and Calhoun."

Referring to the fitness of Senator Fairbanks for the place he said:

"Everybody knows that if the towering figure of Theodore Roosevelt had been out of this canvass, one of the foremost candidates for the presidency would have been Charles W. Fairbanks of Indiana."

As Senator Depew closed there was another outburst of cheering led by Senator Beveridge.

Senator Foraker, of Ohio, said that the convention had gathered here for three things, to adopt a platform, to nominate a candidate for the presidency and to nominate one for the vice presidency. "Two of these things," said he, "we have done and done well. We propose now to do the other and do it equally well. Of all the platforms that we have made in the history of the party there is not one which we would now strike from the records if we could."

He referred to the qualifications of Senator Fairbanks for the place and seconded his nomination.

Address by Pennypacker.

Gov. S. W. Pennypacker, of Pennsylvania, made a brief address seconding the nomination of Senator Fairbanks. He was followed by ex-Senator Carter of Montana who made a short but rousing address. This being all of the seconding speeches scheduled, Chairman Cannon asked:

"Are there any other nominations for vice president?"

"No, no, Fairbanks, Fairbanks," yelled delegates in all parts of the hall.

Senator Cullom stated that Illinois had had a candidate for the vice presidency in the person of Representative R. R. Hitt, of that state, but Mr. Hitt, he said, had wired him from Washington instructing him not to present his name to the convention. Therefore, the Illinois delegation would vote for Senator Fairbanks. This was the signal for Nebraska to

GOVERNOR'S SPEECH

ENTHUSIASM OF DELEGATION

By WALTER J. CHRISTY.
(Staff Correspondent.)
[SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE GAZETTE.]

Chicago, June 23.—Pennsylvania is well pleased with the standard bearers selected by today's convention. Chairman Penrose believes that with men like Roosevelt and Fairbanks heading the ticket, the Keystone commonwealth can be counted upon for a majority mounting into the hundreds of thousands.

Appreciation of the nominations was shown by the delegation. There was no state, not even New York and Indiana, the homes of the nominees, that entered more heartily into the enthusiastic reception tendered the candidates when they were named than did Pennsylvania. The 68 delegates cheered lustily for the standard bearers and the Keystone marker was early to find place in the parade of the states.

Pennsylvania had an important part in the proceedings of the day. The honor of seconding the nomination of Senator Fairbanks was conferred upon Gov. Samuel W. Pennypacker. The chief executive of the second commonwealth of the Union was given a hearty welcome by the 10,000 people that thronged the hall.

As Gov. Pennypacker was led to the center of the stage by Chairman Cannon, the Pennsylvania delegates stood on their chairs and gave three cheers for their executive. The great audience took up the cry and for several minutes the ovation continued. In introducing the governor, Chairman Cannon said:

The Keystone in Fact.

"In every arch there will be found a keystone, in the Republican arch, Pennsylvania by name and fact is the Keystone. I have had three of a kind to present today and I now take very great pleasure in introducing the fourth, Gov. Pennypacker of Pennsylvania."

Gov. Pennypacker's clear voice pierced into every corner of the great hall and he had something to say. As is his custom, he makes words count. This is what he said:

The Republican party held its first convention in that city of Western Pennsylvania, which in energy, enterprise and wealth rivals the great mart upon the shores of the inland lakes wherein after the lapse of nearly half a century we meet today. Pennsylvania may well claim to be the leader among Republican states. The principles which are embodied in the platform of the party as we have adopted it are the results of the teachings of her scholars and statesmen. Her majorities for the nominees of that party are greater and more certain than those of any other state.

She alone of all the states since the election of Abraham Lincoln in 1860 has never given an electorial vote against a candidate of the Republican party for the presidency. She is unselfish in her devotion. During the half century that is gone, no son of her's has been either president or vice president. She has been satisfied, like the earl of Warwick, to be the maker of kings. She has been content that you should have regard to the success of the party and the welfare of the country rather than to the personal interests of her citizens.

Gratitude of Pennsylvania.

The waters of the Ohio, rising in the mountains of Pennsylvania, roll westward, bearing fertility and men to the prairie lands of Indiana. The thought of Pennsylvania turns with kindred feeling toward the state which has produced Oliver P. Morton, Benjamin Harrison and the brave Hoosiers who fought alongside of Reynolds on the Oak Ridge at Gettysburg.

She well remembers that when her own senator, he who did so much for the Republican party and whose wise counsels, alas, are missing today, bore a commission to Washington he had no more sincere supporter than the able and distinguished statesman, who then, as he does now, represented Indiana in the United States senate. Pennsylvania with the approval of her judgment and with the glad anticipation of victory in her heart following a

CONGRATULATIONS ARE POURING IN

THANKS TO NEWSPAPER MEN

THE PITTSBURGH GAZETTE BUREAU,
Room 16, Postal Building,
WASHINGTON, D. C., June 23.

President Roosevelt had just finished luncheon and was sitting with his family on the south portico of the White House shortly after 2 o'clock this afternoon when he received the first news of his nomination by acclamation at Chicago. It was brought to him by his secretary, Mr. Loeb, in a bulletin which had been received at the executive offices.

Mrs. Roosevelt was the first to congratulate him and Miss Alice Roosevelt next. Then Miss Carow extended her felicitations, and was followed by the younger members of the family. The result of the convention being so certain did not appear to detract from the pleasure it afforded this happy family circle.

A few minutes later the president walked across the esplanade leading to the executive offices. He received a number of newspaper correspondents, who congratulated him upon his nomination.

"Does it not come as a great surprise?" asked one, jocosely.

"Indeed, it does," replied the president, keeping up the joke with serious face.

Speaking seriously, however, he expressed great satisfaction at the honor the convention had done him in placing his name at the head of the ticket. A messenger entered with a large box of cigars, which the president passed around to his visitors, in honor of his nomination.

"Don't tell Carrie Nation that I am passing around tobacco," he said, recalling the Kansas hatchet wielder's charge that he was a smoker, and Secretary Loeb's prompt denial that he used tobacco in any form.

The president took occasion to thank the newspaper correspondents for the uniformly fair treatment he and his administration had received at their hands.

Congratulations between Mr. Roosevelt and his running mate were exchanged immediately after the nomination. The following telegrams were given out at the White House this evening:

White House, Washington.

Hon. Charles W. Fairbanks, Chicago, Ill.

Permit me to extend to you and the country my hearty congratulations on your nomination. I need hardly add how much pleased I am personally.

QUIET SESSION AT LINCOLN

The real beginning of the boom that led to the nomination yesterday of Senator Fairbanks as the vice presidential candidate of the Republican party was made in Pittsburgh four months ago.

The conference after which he decided that he would be a candidate for the nomination was held at the Hotel Lincoln in much secrecy. Senator Fairbanks arrived at the Lincoln on the morning of Sunday, February 28, coming from Washington and was joined there shortly afterward by six leading Republicans of Indiana. None of the party registered, but a suite of rooms on the sixth floor of the hotel was engaged and in those rooms the entire party was cloistered until the time of the departure of the night trains.

It was at this meeting that his friends persuaded Senator Fairbanks to allow his name to be used and convinced him that he could have the nomination.

Talked With Close Friends

In the party that met him were Congressman James A. Hemenway and Jesse Overstreet, Frank Henley, Mr. Fairbanks' political manager; the United States district attorney at Indianapolis, an Indianapolis banker and a newspaper man of LaFayette, Ind.

The secrecy of the meeting came near to being broken at one time, when Clarence Ullery, clerk at the Lincoln, recognized the various members of the party. Mr. Ullery was formerly clerk at the Indianapolis club, and there had become acquainted with the prominent men of that city and of Indiana generally. Frank A. Brobst, proprietor of the Lincoln, also spoke to the senator, who tried for a moment to conceal his identity, but gave up that idea and merely cautioned Mr.

DELEGATES COUNT THE COST

By CHESTER D. POTTER.
[SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE GAZETTE.]

Chicago, June 23.—"From the bottom of my heart I want to thank you and Pennsylvania for what you have done for me. The influence of Pennsylvania has been most potentially exerted in my interest and as its representative I have called to express to you my deep and profound appreciation of your efforts."

Senator Charles W. Fairbanks, nominee for vice president, spoke the above words as he clasped the hand of Senator Penrose in the latter's apartments in the Auditorium Annex. Immediately upon the adjournment of the new national committee Senator Penrose returned to the hotel. Senator Fairbanks was one of the first visitors. After chatting a few moments with the Pennsylvania leader, Mr. Fairbanks walked over to Gov. Pennypacker's room and thanked him for the splendid address he had made in seconding his nomination. Speaking of the ticket and the work of the convention Senator Penrose dictated the following:

"The ticket is a strong one and the platform meets all the requirements of the situation. The convention was one of the most harmonious in the history of the party. Pennsylvanians have reason to be pleased with the tariff plank and our state will return its usual vote for presidential year and continue to lead the column of the states in the size of her Republican majority."

National Committee Organizes.

Mr. Penrose will tomorrow attend the meeting of the congressional marine commission. He will also attend the meeting of the commission to be held in Detroit and Cleveland the first of next week and he expects to reach Philadelphia about July 1. The month of July he will probably spend in the Rocky mountains, returning in time to open the state campaign August 1.

The new national committee held a very brief session after the adjournment of the convention. Secretary of Commerce and Labor George B. Cortelyou was elected chairman. Harry S. New, the committeeman from Indiana, was elected vice chairman. Cornelius N. Bliss was re-elected treasurer, and Elmer Dover was re-elected secretary. William J. Stone of Maryland succeeds himself as sergeant-at-arms. A resolution was adopted authorizing Chairman Cortelyou to appoint an executive committee of nine. The personnel of this committee was not announced.

The delegates are rapidly leaving the city. Everyone seems to be entirely satisfied with the convention's work and nowhere is heard a discordant note. There have been conventions which have been more deliriously emotional, more hysterically demonstrative, but none have been more sane in their deliberations, more harmonious in their actions and better satisfied with the result of their labors. Expressions given the writer by members of the delegations from western, southern and eastern states were emphatic in the conclusion that a better ticket could not have been named and that Roosevelt and Fairbanks will sweep the country as did McKinley four years ago.

Expensive for Delegates.

National conventions are expensive affairs. The Pennsylvania delegates paid a uniform rate of $15 a day for rooms without board. This expense was co-

MIKADO'S MEN MARCHING ON

Advance on Senuchen Reported by General Sakharoff.

OUTPOSTS FIGHTING

St. Petersburg, June 23.—The general staff has received the following dispatch from Lieut.-Gen. Sakharoff, under date of June 22:

"At 8 o'clock on the morning of June 21, the Japanese vanguard resumed its advance against our outposts four miles south of Senuchen. The outposts retired slowly towards Senuchen and further on in the direction of Kaichau.

"At noon, a Japanese column consisting of nine squadrons of cavalry, a battery of artillery and a considerable number of infantry were observed advancing in the direction of Senuchen. Other strong columns of the enemy appeared and the Japanese occupied Senuchen toward evening with over a division of infantry, a brigade of cavalry and 32 guns.

"According to information received from our scouts and the inhabitants, the enemy, over a division strong, is concentrated southward of Chapan pass near Chang-Taitien and Long-Lia-Lien.

"The Japanese did not advance beyond Chapan Pass in the direction of Tanchi and the enemy, on the morning of the 22nd, had not occupied the pass between Paitslapei and Panchingine on the Siu Yen—Liao-Yang road. No new movement has been noticed there.

Slight Repulse for Japan.

"Our scouts report that a large detachment of all arms advanced from Siu Yen to Khranza on the morning of June 22. A battalion of the enemy taking advantage of a thick fog tried to surprise our vanguard near Vandiapudze on the Siu Yen—Hai Cheng road. A movement was discovered in time and the Japanese received volleys from five companies of Russians. The enemy retired with some losses toward Siu Yen. One Russian sharpshooter was wounded.

"The Japanese occupied Varangtien, on the main road to Liao-Yang, on the evening of June 19 with a battalion of infantry and a squadron of cavalry. A detachment of the same strength occupied Chandinju, in the valley of the Tzao river, seven miles north of Feng-Wang-Cheng."

Emperor Nicholas has received the following dispatch from General Kuropatkin under date of June 21:

Japanese Army Advancing.

"Gen. Kuroki's advance from Siu-Yen has been suspended evidently to effect an alignment of the two armies. The strength of the enemy's vanguard is approximately a division and several squadrons of cavalry, and the Siu-Yen force of nine squadrons supported by a strong column of infantry toward the south.

"The enemy's position on June 19 and June 21 extended within seven miles southward to Semuchen along a line from the sea to the mountainous and difficult district east of the railway.

"The enemy's advance lines are being strongly held by cavalry and a screen of infantry. The passes and defiles in the mountains east of the railway are also vigilantly guarded.

"A movement of strong Japanese mounted patrols with infantry supports was noted June 20 from 5 o'clock in the afternoon onward. We had no losses in the firing which ensued while the Japanese had several killed and wounded.

Reinforcements Arriving.

"An increase in the Japanese forces had been noticed south of Vanflapudze and near the villages of Manziapudze, Takziapudze and Khakahel. Reinforcements are also reaching the Japanese at the farthest point of the road between Siu-Yen and Tanchi via Palahanjou and Siakhotan.

"The enemy's outposts have occupied the pass between Pangrabel and Pai-Chang on the northern road pine and one-half miles east of Siakhotan, and the Chapan pass, seven and one-half miles south of Siakhotan.

"The Japanese have fortified Kuan-Dian-Sian, mounting 18 guns, with a strong screen.

"The enemy has occupied the village of Sapenhai, 25 miles northeast of Siamatze and is firmly intrenched."

LIAO-YANG, June 22.—(Delayed in Transmission.)—According to reports received at the Russian headquarters the Japanese intend to attack either Kaichau or Tashichau from two sides. Their armies continue to advance from the south and west. The leading detachments of Gen. Oku's army have occupied Senuchen and Japanese scouts have appeared in the vicinity of Kiachau.

Skirmishes Frequent.

Constant skirmishing is in progress between them and the Cossacks who are observing the movements of the enemy. Gen. Kuroki's army has appeared on the road leading westward from Siu-Yen and in the neighboring valleys. The success of the Japanese plan would mean that Korea will lose its value as a base, Niuchwang then being available for this purpose. The movements of the Japanese troops are facilitated by the cessation of the rains and hot weather having set in which has dried the roads.

Another Cossack detachment has fallen into an ambush of Japanese infantry, losing a number of men wounded.

GEN. KUROKI'S HEADQUARTERS IN THE FIELD (Via Fusan), June 22.—Russians from Sanmiah attacked the Japanese outposts in force yesterday, apparently for the purpose of testing their strength. The Russian force consisted of two regiments of cavalry, one of infantry and one battery of artillery. The enemy were defeated and retired toward Shin-Tai-Ling. They are supposed to have sustained considerable loss. On the Japanese side Maj. Kubot was killed and nine men were wounded.

Busy at Port Arthur.

CHEFOO, June 23.—A reconnaissance in force of the approaches to Port Arthur was made yesterday by a Japanese flotilla of three destroyers and four torpedo boats, which ran in from the east about noon and cruised along the whole bluff.

As the flotilla steamed along it was heavily engaged by the forts, but apparently suffered no damage, although a signal mast of one of the torpedo boats was knocked out of shape, as if struck by a shell. The operation was backed at some distance by two cruisers, one of which appeared to be the Yakumo, while an auxiliary cruiser, an old San Francisco liner, the Nippon, or a sister ship, acted as a sea scout in the rear.

MARQUIS OYAMA TO LEAD JAPAN'S FORCES IN FIELD

[Associated Press Cable to The Gazette.]

TOKYO, June 23.—The Marquis Oyama, formerly marshal and chief of the general staff, has been appointed to the supreme command of the imperial armies in the field. His chief of staff will be Lieut. Gen. Kodama, late chief of the general staff.

MORE BIG CONTRACTS FOR WESTINGHOUSE CO.

Two Canadian Companies Come to Pittsburgh for Their Electric Power Equipment.

[By Private Wire to The Gazette.]

NEW YORK, June 23.—The Westinghouse Interests have secured a Canadian contract for various equipment valued at about $300,000. The contract, which was awarded by the Shawinigan Water and Power Company, of Shawinigan Falls, province of Quebec, calls for a 6,600 kilowatt, two phase, 2,200 volt, 300 alternator, 1,800 revolutions a minute, rotating field type alternating generator for direct connection to a water turbine of 1,000 horse-power. There will also be two Westinghouse oil insulated, water cooled transformers, 2,200 volt primary and 50,000 volt secondary, and of 2,200 kilowatts capacity each.

The Canadian Rand Drill Company, of Sherbrooke, Que., has also placed a contract with the Westinghouse people for the installation of a large Corliss compound power driven air compressor to be installed in the new Rand plant. This equipment will be utilized for the purpose of furnishing air for the various pneumatic appliances throughout the works, and will be operated by Westinghouse motors.

The Hamilton plant of the Canadian Westinghouse Company is rapidly nearing completion. At the outset of manufacturing operations, it will give employment to at least 1,000 men.

The United States Products Export Company, which concern looks after the foreign end of the Pressed Steel Car Corporation, has been allotted the contract for the steel to be used in the construction of the car barns and shops for the electric traction system, now under construction at Manila, Philippine Islands. The power house electrical equipment, 2,000 kilowatts, as well as the car motors, will be built at the Westinghouse works, East Pittsburgh.

WILL ISSUE MAGAZINE.

State Board of Health to Publish Monthly Paper for Public Welfare.

Dr. Wilmer R. Batt, quarantine officer-at-large of the state board of health, is in the city in the interests of a monthly magazine which will be issued by the state board, beginning July 1, entitled "Sanitation." It is the intention to scatter the magazine broadcast throughout the state and embody within it articles directing the public generally how to combat disease in the home. The articles are to be almost entirely free from medical terms, so as to be intelligible to the average citizen. Dr. Batt will be the editor.

The magazine is also to serve as a means of placing before the public the work of the state board of health, with the hope of securing larger appropriations thereby.

STARTED IN A VAN.

Married Couple Escorted to the Union Station by Big Crowd.

A novel feature was introduced last evening at the Union station in the way of "seeing off" wedded friends. A large moving van, requiring three horses to haul, was engaged. When the happy couple left the house they were forced to take a seat in the van, where they were joined by about 50 of their friends.

Signs were tacked on the outside of the huge vehicle, noise-producing instruments were put into effective use and red fire was burned by a man seated beside the driver and at the rear of the van.

Tramps Have Miraculous Escape.

APOLLO, PA., June 23.—(Special.)—A long freight train on the West Penn railroad was wrecked about one mile east of Bearing Run today. Twelve cars loaded with ore, stone and lumber were derailed and the track was torn up for about 1,000 feet. Three tramps riding on the train and Engineer Miller and conductor Wagner escaped injury. The tramps had a miraculous escape, being thrown almost 30 feet in the air. Traffic was delayed on both tracks until about 7 o'clock this evening, when the east-bound track was cleared. The wreck was caused by a broken flange.

Rode Young Man on Rail.

BEAVER FALLS, PA., June 23.—(Special.)—George Hartson Tuesday night after calling on a girl at Enon Valley, was waylaid by a crowd of young men, who took his revolver from him, rode him over town on a rail and gave him a ducking at the town pump, and warned him never to come back. He claims to have the names of his assailants and will probably have them arrested.

MORTON DINES AT WHITE HOUSE

Believed He Is to Be New Secretary of Department of Commerce and Labor.

CORTELYOU'S RESIGNATION IN

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 23.

It is generally believed in Washington tonight that Paul Morton of Chicago, vice president of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad, has decided to enter President Roosevelt's cabinet as secretary of commerce and labor.

Mr. Morton arrived in Washington late this afternoon from Chicago, dined with the president and left for New York at midnight. He refused to discuss the matter when he left the White House tonight to go to his train. "I have nothing to say," he said. Then, looking smilingly and nodding toward the White House, he added: "You will have to see the gentleman inside."

Mr. Loeb, the president's secretary, said that there was nothing whatever to be said about Mr. Morton's visit, except that he dined with the president and was leaving the city on a late train. It is generally understood that Mr. Morton was offered the navy portfolio some time ago by the president, but that, after considering it for a week, he declined, on the ground that he was not familiar with the navy and did not think the place would be congenial. Mr. Morton's hurried visit to Washington tonight was brought about by the president coming back at him with another offer—that of the secretaryship of the department of commerce and labor. This position, it is said, is much to Mr. Morton's liking. He is pre-eminently a business man and has been connected with large business enterprises all his life.

Mr. Cortelyou left his resignation as secretary of the department in Washington before his departure, effective upon the appointment of his successor.

FRENCH MINISTER HURT BY HAITIEN SOLDIERY

[By Associated Press to The Gazette.]

PARIS, June 23.—The foreign office has received a dispatch from M. Deprez, the French minister at Port au Prince, Haiti, saying that while he and the German minister were driving past the palace yesterday, they were stoned by soldiers forming the palace guard. M. Deprez was struck on the leg, and slightly injured. The ministers' wives, who were in another carriage, were also pelted. The wife of the French minister is an American.

PORT AU PRINCE, HAITI, June 23.—The attack on the French minister here, M. Deprez, who was struck by a stone yesterday, thrown by one of the guards on duty at the palace, was the outcome of the feeling against foreigners, the natives desiring to hold them responsible for the wretched financial situation of Haiti. The statement that France will demand redress for the attack on her minister is confirmed here.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 23.—Confirmation of the reported attack on the French and German ministers in Haiti came to the state department today in the shape of the following cablegram from Minister Powell, at Port au Prince, dated June 22:

"The French and German ministers, with their ladies, while passing the palace in their carriages yesterday, were stoned by the palace guards. The French minister is slightly injured. Apology demanded, but none given. Both have cabled their governments."

The most serious feature of the affair is that the attack was made, not by an irresponsible mob, but by the palace guard, which directly connects the Haitien government with the occurrence.

Brokers Lose Their Phones.

NEW YORK, June 23.—(Special.)—Without any apparent reason, 14 stock exchange houses had their telephone connections with the exchange discontinued. The firms do not know why and the telephone company does not, either. The board of governors does, however. The reasons generally offered in gossip were that some at least had been charged with doing business with the members of outside exchanges or with "bucketshops."

MOTHER OF FAIRBANKS NOTIFIED BY HER SON

Vice Presidential Nominee Sends Message to Aged Woman at Springfield.

[By Associated Press to The Gazette.]

SPRINGFIELD, O., June 23.—The mother of Senator Fairbanks, Mrs. Mary Adelaide Fairbanks, lives in this city, with her daughter, Mrs. M. L. Milligan. She is 74 years old. She is of the opinion that her son would have preferred to remain a senator instead of becoming the nominee for vice president.

"I was in Washington last winter, at his home," she said, "and many men came to see him in regard to his being a candidate for vice president. I am, of course, very proud that he should have been nominated, and particularly since there was such a strong demand for him that he could hardly do otherwise than accept. I think the position he now has is one of the most honorable that a man can have in politics. There is a great deal of influence and dignity about the senate, and a great many opportunities to do good."

Mrs. Fairbanks received an affectionate message from her son in less than an hour after the convention adjourned this afternoon.

Senator Fairbanks has extensive manufacturing interests in this city, and owns much real estate here. The senator visited his mother here about two weeks ago.

It is said that all opposition to him has been withdrawn and that he will be selected unanimously.

NEW YORK SAFE FOR ROOSEVELT, SAYS DEPEW

CHICAGO, ILL., June 23.—(Special.)—Senator Depew thinks New York is safely Republican, no matter whom the Democrats nominate. The opposition can name no candidate, sane or insane, who can carry the state, or come nearer to it than 30,000 votes. The country is a long way from being ready to trust the Democratic party again."

SENATOR FAIRBANKS WAS PERSUADED HERE

Pittsburgh is pleased with the nominations of the Republican national convention. On the streets, at the hotels and clubs, in street cars and wherever men congregated yesterday afternoon the logical conclusion of the convention and the easy certainty of the success of the Republican ticket was discussed.

They Can't Beat Teddy.

"They an't beat Teddy," was a common phrase. There are many Pittsburghers who remember pleasantly Mr. Fairbanks, the vice presidential nominee, as a Pittsburgh newspaper man. Some representative expressions on the choice follow:

Ex-Lieut. Governor Walter Lyon—Everybody's for the ticket. There is no question of its election. Roosevelt's only enemies are in Wall street and even the bulls and bears will hardly choose the Democracy rather than Roosevelt. I doubt there having ever been a ticket so sure of success at the polls.

Col. J. M. Schoonmaker, vice president and general manager of the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie railroad—I am delighted with the ticket. I think it exceedingly strong and certain of election.

H. C. McEldowney, president of the Union Trust Company—It is a strong ticket without question. It is sure of election. Roosevelt's record is all right all through—straightforward and open.

Ex-Governor William A. Stone—The Republican ticket with Roosevelt and Fairbanks, will be elected by an unprecedented majority. Coming into the presidency as Roosevelt did, no one else could have succeeded better. His success only shadows a greater success, a greater administration and a greater popularity in the years that will follow his crowning as the popular choice next November.

PENROSE WAS FAVORITE.

President Roosevelt Wanted Another Man for National Chairman.

Thomas J. Ford, the Republican county chairman, returned yesterday from Chicago, where he attended the Republican national convention. Mr. Ford gave an interesting talk on the chance Senator Penrose had to be selected as national chairman. Mr. Ford said:

"Penrose would have been the national chairman but for the positive request for the selection of Cortelyou, made by the president. On Friday and Saturday the expression in favor of Penrose for the place were general and strong. It was hoped until the last that the president would change his mind, but on Monday Bliss arrived and Penrose's prospects faded."

NO SETTLEMENT REACHED.

Tin Plate Conference Still Disagrees on the Wage Scale.

The Amalgamated Association and the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company's representatives failed to reach a settlement of the wage scale at the second day's joint conference yesterday. The men are sticking out for an advance of 8 per cent over present wages, which are 10 per cent lower than last year's scale. The manufacturers are asking that the present 18 per cent reduction from last year's scale be adopted.

A settlement is not expected by either side before the present agreement expires. To avoid a stoppage of work, President Shaffer has requested the manufacturers to continue running the plants until an agreement is reached, the scale to be whatever is agreed upon by the joint conference.

Another joint conference will be held today, and previous to the meeting the Amalgamated association committee will hold a short session in the offices of the association.

SENATOR FAIRBANKS WAS LOCAL "A. P." MANAGER

Thirty Years Ago the Vice Presidential Nominee Was a Pittsburgh Newspaper Man.

Senator Charles W. Fairbanks, the vice presidential candidate, is well remembered by the older Pittsburgh newspapermen as a former manager of the Associated Press in this city. Mr. Fairbanks had been recently graduated from the Ohio Wesleyan university at Delaware, O., and had come to Pittsburgh to study in the office of Hampton & Dalzell. He was a "Pharisee" and "lived" while he studied he obtained from his uncle, William Henry Smith, then the head of the Associated Press, the appointment of Pittsburgh representative.

The office was not the important one it has become today. Young Fairbanks was a little more than a year in it, as are required to see that the outside world knows daily of the doings of Pittsburgh. It was while in this position that he made the acquaintance and formed a friendship that still continues with Col. W. C. Connelly, jr., for 25 years the local "A. P." manager, and then an operator for the Western Union.

Mr. Fairbanks' stay in Pittsburgh lasted about one year. He had come here in 1872, and at the end of a year sought admission to the local bar, but was refused because he had not been for three years a resident of Ohio. Then the late Pittsburgh, went to Cleveland and was admitted afterward at Indianapolis in 1874.

The wedding last December of Robert Fairbanks, the senator's son, to Miss Ethel Cassidy, daughter of Mrs. Edward Cassidy of Pittsburgh, was one of the features of the season and forms another link in the future vice president's connection with Pittsburgh.

TEACHERS FOR EGYPT.

Assiut College Sends Call for Women Instructors Who Are "Live."

Wanted—Two teachers and a lady superintendent for Assiut college, Egypt. They are not to be mere drones, to be college graduates, but should be good English scholars with clear, distinct enunciation and pronunciation and be "live" teachers.

Such is the call received here from the Rev. Dr. J. R. Alexander, who is in charge of the college, a school for missionaries, located at Assiut, Egypt. While the institution has prospered under the guidance of men, Dr. Alexander writes that "we want women's presence and influence, and are particularly anxious to have a lady superintendent take charge of the domestic department, who would find a large staff of assistants."

The Rev. C. R. Watson, secretary of the board of foreign missions, Witherspoon building, Philadelphia, is mentioned as being able to give all necessary particulars.

PRISONERS WERE SCARED.

Officers Barricaded Doors of Baggage Room, Fearing Violence.

Three detectives and several uniformed officers barricaded the doors of the baggage room at the Baltimore & Ohio depot in McKeesport yesterday afternoon. They had two prisoners, Frank Leighter and John Donahue, who were held for highway robbery and assault. Two foreigners had accused them of enticing them out if town and robbing them on a lonely road. The loss was said to be about $100.

This story spread among the foreigners and when the prisoners were taken to the railroad station a mob followed the officers and their prisoners. This caused the officers to barricade the doors of the baggage room when word was brought that nearly 100 foreigners, mostly Italians, were marching toward the station and meant trouble for the prisoners. As it turned out, the party coming toward the baggage room was simply a number of foreign workmen who were returning to Europe and were escorted by their friends. The two prisoners were brought to the county jail for safety.

Frank V. Boyle was elected first lieutenant and Robert W. Brewer was elected second lieutenant of Company E, Fourteenth regiment, National Guard of Pennsylvania, at an election held at the company's armory last night. Maj. Harry D. Boyle has been in the company about three years. The election was held to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Edward J. Black as first lieutenant.

Stabbed In a Fight.

Edward Hoffman of Bessemer avenue, North Braddock, was injured yesterday afternoon in a fight with Michael Bablitz, a Slav. It is alleged Bablitz drew a knife and attacked Hoffman. Hoffman received four serious gashes. Two workmen found him near the entrance to the works, unconscious, in a pool of blood. Bablitz was arrested and held to wait Hoffman's injuries.

WABASH PASSES BOND INTEREST

Heavy Operating Expense and Extension Improvements Cut Into Road's Earnings.

ACTION TAKEN IS SURPRISE

The Pittsburgh Gazette Bureau, Herald Building, Herald Square.
NEW YORK, June 23.

Persons who have been prophesying the payment of interest in the immediate future on Wabash debenture B bonds were disappointed after the meeting of the Wabash directors today, when it was announced not only that no interest had been declared on the B's, but the interest on debenture A bonds had been passed for the first time since 1893.

Directors of Vanderbilt lines also took a conservative stand today. It was the regular day for the declaration of the Illinois, Indiana & Iowa dividend, but it was decided to defer its declaration for the present at least.

A semi-annual dividend of 1¼ per cent was declared on Canada Southern stock. This is ¼ per cent less than the last dividend on this stock, but ¼ per cent more than was paid semi-annually last year.

The failure of the Wabash directors to declare the interest on the debenture A's was a surprise in well-informed railroad circles, and the necessity for doing so was not realized by the majority of the Wabash directors themselves until they were informed this morning that the Wabash surplus would not justify the declaration of the regular interest. It was then deemed advisable to pass the interest altogether, in order that the resources of the company might be reserved as far as possible.

Joseph Ramsey, Jr., president of the Wabash, said today that the heavy operating cost during the last six months, combined with the extensive improvements that have been made on the system during that time, the cost of which has been largely defrayed from earnings, rendered the payment of interest on the debentures out of the question. Mr. Ramsey said that gross earnings of the system had increased steadily for more than 19 months, but that extraordinary causes had caused a shrinkage in the net revenue. It is probable that interest in the debenture A's will be restored at the next date for the declaration of interest on the debentures, as it is expected that the benefit of the Pittsburgh extension will be felt by that time.

PRINCE HEADS RANSOM PARTY

MORE HOPE IN WASHINGTON

[Special Cable to The Gazette.]
(Copyright, 1904, by New York Herald Co.)

LONDON, June 23.—A special dispatch to the Daily Telegraph from Tangier says:

Gray dawn was breaking when the ransom party, headed by Prince Achmed, shereef of Wazan, made ready to leave Tangier this morning. Orders had come from Mohammed El Torres during the night that there should be no further delay.

I awaited the expedition in the market place, which was just resuming its wonted activity. The road to Fez, as far as the house of Mr. Perdicaris, at half past five, was crowded with curious villagers. It was a straggling procession that was marshalled in order outside the town, the shereef and his attendants leading the way with an armed guard on horseback. An escort of 20 of the sultan's soldiers, carrying Mausers, followed, and the prisoners, 43 in number, at perfect liberty and unshackled, walked in a throng. Then came a number of pack mules laden with carpets, tents and stores. As the party moved over the ruined Roman bridge and passed Mr. Perdicaris' house, which is still guarded by American marines, Mrs. Varley and her two daughters wished the mission godspeed. A further armed escort joined the column on the road to Fez.

I have asked whether American marines will be landed, and the admiral says they will not. So that danger is over. I inquired when the fleet would sail, and was told it depended upon instructions from Washington.

The sultan is credited with the intention of punishing Raisuli himself, without waiting to be asked to do so by the powers concerned.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 23.—There is again a hope for the immediate release of Ion Perdicaris and Cromwell Varley, who are held for ransom by the Moorish bandit, Raisuli. The curt demand, "Perdicaris alive or Raisuli dead," made upon the sultan of Morocco yesterday at the direction of Secretary Hay, has borne fruit.

Consul-General Gummere has cabled the state department that Zelal, one of the most influential Moorish chieftains, had consented to act as the agent through which the ransom will be exchanged for the liberty of the captives. It was necessary to assure Zelal that his participation in the negotiations would not later bring down upon him the displeasure of the sultan. Mr. Gummere states that he hopes the release of the captives will be effected today or tomorrow.

Starving and unconscious from the ravages of disease, Mrs. Mary McCarthy, aged 35, of 714 South avenue, Allegheny, was found last night at 11:30 o'clock by Capt. James Wilson and Policeman Mike Redman. For two days and two nights the woman had laid on a straw mattress in the house, alone. She was removed to the Allegheny General hospital.

On Tuesday the husband moved all the furniture and provisions from the house, with the exception of the mattress on which the woman was found. He was to have returned for his wife, but failed to appear.

Capt. Wilson, while standing near the ball grounds last night, was told by a stranger that he had heard groans issuing from a house in South avenue, and an investigation was made. The physicians say the woman's condition is critical.

Coroner Hears Testimony Regarding Uselessness of Life Preservers

NO VACATION FOR FIRE FIGHTERS

Mayor Hays Vetoes the Resolution and Common Council Sustains His Objections.

KNOCK OUT ARTESIAN WELLS

Mayor Hays last night vetoed the councilmanic resolution giving the firemen a vacation with pay, and the Citizens party majority in common council sustained the mayor's objections. Unless a new resolution introduced by the Republicans should pass muster with the mayor, the firemen will receive no vacation this year, unless they take a couple of weeks off at their own expense.

Common council met in special session to make the changes in the judgment bonds requested by the purchasers of the bonds. While council was waiting until the printer sent the papers to city hall other business was transacted.

The mayor's objections to the resolution giving the firemen a vacation were read by H. B. Davis, clerk of council. The mayor alleged that the resolution was not passed legally because it was adopted by councils on the same day on which it was introduced; the resolution was not fair, because it excluded from its benefits firemen who had not been in the service for a year; it was impracticable because to lay off so many men without providing substitutes would cripple the force, and anyhow, there was no money in the fire bureau to pay substitutes.

Those Who Voted.

Councilman William Brand offered a motion to pass the resolution over the mayor's objections. It was well known, he said, that last year the fire bureau was 53 men short and $60,000 was thus saved, showing that, as the appropriation this year was even larger, there would be plenty of money to give firemen a vacation with pay and provide substitutes. How could the director of public safety assure the mayor that the vacation plan would cripple the service. Mr. Brand asked, when the director himself had confessed that he did not know how many firemen were employed nor how many engine houses the city had.

Several Citizens party members said the mayor's letter had given them new light on the subject and although they had voted for the resolution they would now vote to approve the mayor's objections. Then mayor's veto was sustained by a vote of 24 to 16. Those who voted with the firemen were Bailey, Barr, Barton, Bergmann, Brand, Fullerton, Gibbon, Girdwood, Joyce, Kohne, Muby, Meyers, Morin, McKnight, Perley and Walls. Those who voted with the mayor were Bonini, Bright, Collins, Cromlish, Dempsey, Frenkel, Gulliani, Hammer, Helmold, Hughes, Kalchthaler, Maslowski, Matthews, McKelvey, McNally, Pfankuch, Porter, Rapp, Roenigk, Scott, Shenkan, Simon, Zeuger and Ward.

Mr. Perley thereupon presented another resolution exactly like the other. It was regularly referred to the public safety committee, so that if it should pass councils the mayor's objections on the score of illegality will not hold good.

Additional Help Wanted.

The following resolutions were introduced: Opening Murray avenue from Forbes to Wilkins; authorizing the director of the department of public works to contract for 5,000 water meters at a cost not to exceed $60,000; increasing the salary of the plumbing inspector of the bureau of health from $1,500 to $2,000; transferring $15,000 from the Point bridge fund to the improvement of Schenley park road grading, paving and curbing Birmingham street, Pocussett avenue and the eastern half of South Twenty-first street; transferring $3,000 from the Point bridge fund for a ferry boat to ply across the river while the bridge is being repaired; annulling the contract for a steel superstructure to the Lincoln avenue bridge and authorizing the director of public works to make a contract for a stone arch bridge, the cost not to exceed $140,000.

An ordinance authorizing the director to appoint additional employes of the bureau of meters and fixing their salaries was introduced. It provides for one engineer at $100.66 a month; one assistant engineer at $125 a month; three draftsmen at $100 a month each; three clerks at $75 a month each; one general foreman at $125 a month; a chief meter inspector at $80 a month and an assistant inspector at $2.50 a day.

Mr. Helmold, for the finance committee, presented the bonds and agreements with the four city depositories, the Columbia, Farmers Deposit, Second National and Allegheny National banks. These agreements had been handed into the finance committee, were not read there, were not read in council and yet they passed. Mr. Brand maintained that the resolutions ought to be printed and pass through the same procedures required for ordinances, but President R. B. Ward overruled him and decided that they could be finally passed right then. This was done.

Against the Wells.

The resolution transferring $10,000 from the Point bridge fund, to bore artesian wells, came up. Mr. McKelvey moved that it be referred to a special committee, consisting of Porter, Collins and Walls. Mr. Roenigk interpreted this as an effort to kill off the resolution, especially as his motion requiring the committee to report at the next meeting was voted down. A debate ensued, Mr. Roenigk expatiating on the beauties of pure cold water. Mr. Gulland saying that filtered water, which the city would obtain after awhile, was better than well water and that it was cheaper to cool the filtered water with ice than to maintain the pumps for Roenigk's artesian wells. By a vote of 26 to 14 the ordinance was referred to the special committee.

The printed correction of the judgment bonds had not arrived and a recess of 10 minutes was taken. When the ordinance finally came council reconvened and it was passed unanimously.

The resolution appropriating $5,000 for the entertainment of the commissioners from the Philippines was adopted. President Ward announced that he appointed T. A. Milby on the committees of public safety and surveys, places left vacant when James Reed, Milby's predecessor, died.

ALLEGHENY POLICE LOOK FOR FIRE-BUGS

Frequent Blazes of Unknown Origin Result in Added Vigilance of Officers.

Under the orders of Superintendent Campbell, the detective force of Allegheny is scouring the city in an effort to run down the persons responsible for the numerous fires on the North Side within two weeks. Since the destruction of the city light plant, Saturday night, three serious fires have caused a loss of $75,000.

Superintendent Campbell was notified yesterday by Edward Warner of 521 Taylor avenue of an attempt by incendiaries to burn his stable late Wednesday night. The family found a blaze in the barn. A pile of paper and rags soaked in oil was found in a corner.

The origin of the fire in the city light plant and the blaze that destroyed several manufacturing establishments at Grant and North avenues on Wednesday morning is unknown. Nothing is known as to what started the fire in two stores in Beaver avenue about 4 o'clock yesterday morning nor in the slaughter house in East street about the same time.

This has aroused Superintendent Campbell to the fact that something must be done at once, so that the entire front-office force got orders last night to arrest anyone whom they suspect of being firebugs.

Larkin Wants a Rebate.

Controller Larkin yesterday received another list of "lights out," and after reading it he said that he would rebate from the Allegheny County Light Company for every hour that any light failed to shine. The city ought to have what it paid for, he said.

Alter Family Reunion.

VINDICATION IS MRS. PHIPPS' PLEA

Judge Reed Sees Henry Phipps With Hopes of Reaching a Settlement.

COMPROMISE IS IMPOSSIBLE

Attorneys for Mrs. Lawrence C. Phipps, who is fighting for the possession of her two daughters and vindication of certain charges made by her husband, hinted yesterday that a definite plan of action has been decided upon. James S. Young, local counsel for Mrs. Phipps, said:

"You may prepare for news within several days."

The first victory of Mrs. Phipps, it is said, will be the gaining of custody of her children, and then will begin the counteraction against her husband.

Mr. Phipps will reach Denver today, where he will be met by his counsel, Gerald Hughes, who left here Tuesday night for that city. Judge Platt Rodgers, Mrs. Phipps' Denver representative, is on the trail of Mr. Phipps and his lawyer and will keep his client informed of any unexpected move on the part of the husband.

As the case stood yesterday, the finish looks decidedly in favor of Mrs. Phipps. Attorney Young returned from New York during the morning. He was there in conference with Judge Platt Rodgers and James S. Beck, in the offices of the latter, 44 Wall street. Former Judge J. H. Reed, who represents Mr. Phipps, was also in New York, but did not meet the attorneys of Mrs. Phipps. He remained there yesterday on the case and is expected to reach here this morning.

It was learned yesterday that Henry Phipps requested an interview with Judge Reed relating to the divorce case. In this connection it was learned that Lawrence C. Phipps has left the question of a settlement with Judge Reed and his uncle. Even before the Phipps children were taken from the Hotel Netherland, on June 3, Judge Reed was retained by Mr. Phipps, principally upon the suggestion of his uncle.

What action Mrs. Phipps has decided upon is being carefully guarded. Once in possession of the children, she will endeavor to smother all proceedings in Denver and fight out the case here or in New York city. This much has been practically admitted by her attorneys. Whether Mr. Phipps will withdraw his action for divorce and Mrs. Phipps begin one cannot be learned. It is understood that she has several strong cards to play and in making her daring move she will be protected by a brilliant array of legal talent.

H. Sellers McKee, an uncle of Mrs. Phipps, it is reported, has offered advice of a tempting nature. Mrs. Phipps has talked with him over the long-distance telephone to New York on several occasions since her present stay in Pittsburgh.

Immediately upon arrival in the city yesterday, Attorney Young called on Mrs. Phipps at Grandview, and a lengthy conference followed. Mr. Young admitted that he was in New York on the Phipps case, but would not say what action has been or will be taken. Judge Rodgers, he said, went to Denver from New York.

"Has P. C. Knox been engaged on behalf of Mrs. Phipps?" he was asked.

"No, he has not," was the reply. "Now, that is all I am going to say about the case for the present."

At Grandview yesterday it was said the two children are expected. Mrs. Phipps was declared to be suffering from a headache and could not be seen. Her continued presence at Grandview is taken to mean that she will be required shortly to sign legal documents which will be the instruments of local courts.

SLICK BURGLAR WAS ABLE TO JUMP WELL

After Securing a Skirt Into Which Money Was Sewn, He Got Away by His Agility.

The savings of years, amounting to $300, were taken from Mrs. G. Desealzi, an aged Italian woman, of 910 Webster avenue, early yesterday morning by a burglar. The money was sewn in the hem of her skirt, which was carried away by the night prowler.

Mrs. Desealzi keeps a boarding house. She lived on the third floor. Under her window is a summer kitchen, the roof of which extends well up on the side of the building, about 4 o'clock in the morning she heard some one walking about her room. She rose in time to see a man dressed in a dark suit of clothes walking toward the window. In an instant the man bounded to the window sill and jumped to the kitchen roof, with her skirt on his arm. From the roof he jumped into the back yard.

The woman called for help. When her sons arrived the man had disappeared into Webster avenue. Investigation showed the burglar had taken a ladder in the back yard and placed it against the summer kitchen and climbed to the roof. He drew the ladder up after him, and climbed into Mrs. Desealzi's bed room. There were only a few persons about Mrs. Desealzi's house who knew that she had money sewn in her skirt, and the police are at a loss to know how the burglar had this information.

Whoever the burglar may be, he was active. The jump he made from Mrs. Desealzi's window was about 15 feet, and his second leap to the ground, 10 feet.

EVERYBODY INTERESTED HAS SECURED LAWYER

Many-Sided Legal Fight Started Over the $40,000 Loan Promised by Prudential Trust.

The agreed loan of $40,000 to the original contractors for the erection of the Buckingham apartments, in Craft avenue, Oakland, has resulted in a many-sided legal fight over the Prudential Trust Company. Nearly everyone interested in any phase of the matter has gone into court, and the lawyers are calling each other many unmentionable names, it is credibly asserted.

One peculiar feature of the case is that among other things the safe deposit vault of the trust company has been attached, and in it are the papers, jewelry and other valuables of many persons. Inasmuch as the officers of the trust company have the combination, and the vault is heavy, it is not feared that anyone will walk away with it.

A sheriff's sale notice is posted on the doors of the bank, at Center and Penn avenues, stating that the office furniture, fixtures, books, etc., will be sold at 10:30 o'clock on Wednesday, June 29.

The Mercantile Trust Company, however, secured yesterday a rule on Machin & Brown, the plaintiffs against the Prudential Trust, to show cause why the execution should not be stayed and the property levied on by the sheriff turned over to the assignee.

Liberty school—High school class, Grace Bissell, Nancy Martin, William Van Kirk, Dorothy Gittings.

Osceola school—Catherine Armstrong, Jane Llewellyn.

Friendship school—May Turton and Harris Gazzam.

STREET CARS AND AUTOS MUST USE SLOWER SPEED

Director Moore Will Prepare an Ordinance to Regulate the Operation of Electric Cars and Automobiles Throughout City.

Director Moore will have an ordinance introduced at the next meeting of councils regulating the speed of street cars and automobiles. Automobiles will not be allowed to run more than eight miles an hour in the lower section of the city and 12 miles an hour on the boulevards.

The police maintain that street cars run entirely too fast in the lower section of the city. There is no ordinance regulating the speed of electric cars, and Director Moore, after making an investigation of the number of persons injured each year by cars in the downtown section of the city, decided an ordinance must be framed to reduce speed. It is the idea of Director Moore to have a scale of speed posted in all the car barns in the city.

The motormen will be instructed to study this scale, and in case of a violation they will be arrested and fined by the city magistrates. Director Moore believes a slow speed should be maintained in the lower section of the city, but the rate could be increased in Oakland and the East End districts, where the streets are not so congested. Life and limb are constantly in jeopardy from street cars at the speed they now pass through the downtown streets.

The question of automobiles will be taken up by Director Moore and several councilmen before the ordinance is drafted. There are a number of automobile owners among the councilmen, and Director Moore intends to solicit their opinion on the matter.

Another Allegheny Fire.

Fire of unknown origin yesterday morning partially destroyed the grocery store and meat market of Fogel & Mermelstein, 682 Preble avenue, Allegheny, and scorched the dry goods store of Harry Goldstein next door. The loss is estimated at $3,000, covered by insurance.

Our Totally Different Serge Suits for Men.

$10.00, $12.00, $15.00, $20.00, $30.00.

A Joseph Horne Co. label on the inside of a serge suit is tantamount to saying there is none better, very few so good—for the same money.

We invite the most searching and critical examination of the way our suits are tailored, of the grades of cloth used. Every one all wool, with pure wool lining. Some of our serge suits are lined with silk, and it is good silk.

Note especially the fit of the coat, how it sets around the neck, how the shoulders stand out, what a graceful hang the coat has. The fit of these serge suits could not be duplicated except by a custom tailor, and for that fit you would have to pay double what we ask.

Blue or black serge suits, as your fancy suggests.

Men's two-piece suits, the swagger Summer suit, at $8.50 and up to $28.00. The best selection we have ever given the men of Pittsburg. Cheviots, cassimeres and homespuns. Coats fourth lined with mohair or silk. Trousers made with permanent turn-ups or without. Also made with belt loop and hip buckles.

Every man needs a raincoat. Here's the way we're selling a small lot—only 33—and it's not likely you'll have such another opportunity:

$15.00 for Raincoats formerly $20.00, $22.50, $25.00.
$20.00 for Raincoats formerly $30.00.

The sizes run from 32 to 46. Just a clean-up of broken lots. Dark gray and fancy materials.

Men's Newest Neckwear.

Did you ever notice how particular about his neckwear a man is? He may be indifferent about every other article of his attire, and be more than critical about his necktie. One man may like black, another may think indistinct blue the correct thing, and so on, and each must have a selection to meet his fancy. Well, we can please them all.

We have another shipment of finest English Foulard Silk Neckwear just in. Included is a variety of the ever popular blue with white dots, figures and stripes as well as black and white, green and tan, figures in contrasting colors. There is no neckwear so satisfactory as that made from these fine English silks, they don't fray, and crease less than any other silk.

These are exclusive with us, as we import the silks and have it made up into the latest style neckwear.

Friday, June 24, 1904.

The Gazette desires to call the attention of those of its readers who contemplate summer trips to the announcements of the many summer resort hotels published on page 14 of this issue.

As a sign of the times the fact may be cited that permits issued yesterday for buildings to the value of $250,000, nearly all dwellings. It was not a remarkably good day either, for the growth of Pittsburgh is constant. It does indicate an increasing building movement and that augurs well for better business in some lines. An increased building movement is an expression of confidence in the future, for men do not put the money they have into dwellings unless they feel sure there is more to come. There is no boom in this city at present, but it is equally certain there is no apprehension of worse times to come.

Local indorsements of the ticket and platform put forth by the Chicago convention are of a character to show that Pittsburgh is more than satisfied. Pittsburgh has always been enthusiastic in its support of President Roosevelt and his policies and proud of its present member of the cabinet. It is entirely friendly to Senator Fairbanks, in whose cause the entire Pennsylvania state delegation exerted itself. Being satisfied with the candidates, Pittsburghers are naturally pleased with the platform which recounts the party record and promises adherence to those principles so often indorsed by overwhelming majorities in the "state of Allegheny" from Lincoln's day to this. And the remainder of the country has as good cause to be enthusiastic as Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania.

Under the stimulus of Secretary Hay's demand for a live American citizen or a dead bandit, there is marked progress in the negotiation for the delivery of Perdicaris and Varley. Hostages have been forwarded to Raisuli to be exchanged for the prisoners and an agreement has been reached whereby the ransom is to be paid in the territory of a neighboring prince. Consul General Gummere confidently expects the exchange to be effected without further delay and to have Perdicaris and Varley safe back in Tangier next week. It will be well if his expectations are realized, for that will put an end to an irritating incident. But after that is done Perdicaris and all other American citizens will wisely avoid Tangier, for there is no sign that the sultan of Morocco has the character or spirit to make his country safe for travelers.

Current report has it that because a large army of laborers may be turned to political account, the reduction of the hump and the construction of the filtration plant are to be done by the city without the intervention of contractors. We seriously doubt the legality of such a course if it is contemplated. The city charter and the laws of the state provide for the letting of contracts when the sums involved exceed certain figures. Aside from that almost every business man will agree that work will be done more cheaply through a system of contracts and sub-contracts that secures the personal supervision of men who have more than a philanthropic interest in having the work done cheaply and well. It will tax the public service to supply inspectors who will see to it that the work is done right, or that the contract penalties are enforced.

Since the local weather bureau station has removed to excellent new quarters at the top of one of the city's tallest buildings we may expect a better service. Col. Frank Ridgway, the observer, will do his best, as he always has, and he is striving to have new facilities added to his station. He has always been of great service to local river and mercantile interests by giving warnings of floods, freezing and general storms. In fact the chief complaints against the weather bureau pertain to the daily forecasts made at Washington which apparently take no account of our peculiar local conditions. Pittsburgh is affected by lake region storms at times as well as those belonging to the Ohio valley, but the Washington bureau appears to ignore the fact, with the result that the good citizen is sometimes caught in the rain without his umbrella.

Director Moore of the department of public safety proposes an ordinance to limit the speed of automobiles and street cars, particularly in the downtown section. This is a proper measure for securing the safety of pedestrians, but as a matter of fact fewer accidents happen in this downtown section than in other parts of the city. The accidents in the congested business district are oftener due to vehicles drawn by horses than those propelled by other power. The disregard of pedestrians' rights shown by Pittsburgh drivers commands the attention of every visitor within our gates and the indignation of most of them. Along with the regulation of automobile and street car speeds we suggest making examples of a few of those drivers who charge across crowded crossings with no more warning than a whistle or a curse, if that much. Traffic must move, but recklessness does not facilitate the movement.

A Strong Ticket.

The work of the Republican national convention was completed by the nomination of the candidates and a manifestation of enthusiasm as great as if the names of the nominees had not been fully decided upon in advance. The ticket is as strong as any ever nominated and is in absolute accord with the platform adopted the day before.

Theodore Roosevelt for president was a foregone conclusion two years ago. The plain people had picked him then as his own successor and each month since but served to confirm that choice. Mr. Roosevelt has long been before the public and he has always been a popular favorite. He is in higher favor now than ever before. The reason is not far to seek. He is a man who does things. The American people admire and love the man who compels things to happen. They prefer the man who is earnest, who has force and character and individuality. In such a man they can forgive even a serious mistake, but they have naught but contempt for the supine weakling who does nothing because he is always afraid to offend. Roosevelt as president has been not only a doer of things, but a doer of right things. He has served the people with fidelity, courage, honesty and vigor. He has been at all times frank, taking the whole people into his confidence. He has paid close heed to the popular will, but has been deaf to the factitious criticisms inspired by selfish interests. For all of these things the president is admired, respected and above all trusted.

President Roosevelt has proven that he may be trusted, that he will not betray the faith of a confiding people. He may be denounced—he has been denounced—by the few who are not content without special favors, but he has been true to the nation and his duty. These sterling qualities inspired the unbounded enthusiasm shown by yesterday's convention, and they will inspire the support that will give him an overwhelming majority in November for a full term of usefulness in directing the affairs of the foremost nation in the world.

Senator Charles Warren Fairbanks, nominated for vice president, needs no introduction to the public. He has carved out for himself a career that speaks eloquently for his force of character and his standing where he is known. On the floor of the senate he has been a leader, an advocate of progressive and sound policies. He is a man of affairs. He will make a model vice president and if he should be called upon to perform the duties of the president—which all hope he will not during the next four years—he would be capable of continuing the policies of his chief as effectively as the latter has carried out those of the beloved McKinley. Senator Fairbanks is in close and intelligent touch with the interests and policies of the nation, as he is with the sentiment and wishes of the people.

The ticket presented by the Republican convention is thus seen to be one worthy of the support of every American. It represents the best that is in our political system, as the platform and the party represent all that is best in our national progress and achievements. The Republican party has always been one of positive force and never a party of negation. That is why it has enjoyed the unprecedented confidence and support of the people. No other party in this or any other country of representative government has maintained supremacy for as large a proportion of time as has the Republican party. It is because the aggressive, educated people of the United States have faith in the wisdom of its positive policies and confidence in its vigorous protection of every American interest at home or abroad.

An Impending Battle.

It is believed in St. Petersburg that a general engagement is impending in the region about Kaiping and Taschichao, upper Liao-Tung peninsula. Gen. Kuroki's troops have stopped their advance up the Ai-Ho valley and have actually fallen back from Soimatze to the mountains, where they are fortifying. But while the right wing is falling back the left is advancing from Siuyen toward Kaiping to form a junction with Gen. Oku, who is pushing northward from the victory of Telissu. It is admitted at Tokyo that the plan of campaign has been changed and the Marquis Oyama has gone forward to take command of all the armies in the field.

For the first time Gen. Kuropatkin is accepting the gage of battle. He has thrown large forces of men forward from Liao-Yang to meet the Japanese advance. Having made a juncture with Gen. Stakelberg's retreating force he has taken personal command of the several divisions, so the two commanders-in-chief will be pitted against each other in the approaching battle. The withdrawal of the Japanese outposts from the eastern road apparently removes the threat of an attack upon the Russian line of communication, which leaves Kuropatkin free to give his energies to the battle line in front. But while the Japanese outposts have retired along the Ai road for 30 miles, they have not abandoned it, a fact made apparent by the repulse of a Russian force consisting of one battery of artillery, two squadrons of cavalry and a regiment of artillery, reported by Gen. Kuroki.

Apparently the change in plan noted at Tokyo has been inspired by the purpose to secure Niuchwang before the rainy season is on in force. That is the Russian interpretation, and as Russia concedes the possession of Niuchwang would be of great advantage to the Japanese during that season, the forward movement of Gen. Kuropatkin is accounted for. He desires to prevent the Japanese reaching that point. Over this issue a general battle may be begun within a week and from the fighting qualities shown by both sides at the Yalu, Nanshan and Telissu, a battle may be expected that will rank with those famous in history. For the numbers engaged the Japanese losses at Nanshan and those of the Russians at Telissu were large. In the coming battle the troops engaged are likely to outnumber those of previous engagements at least five to one. The Japanese are superior in artillery in the number and quality of guns and the manner in which they are served. That fact should turn the tide of battle in their favor and the bravery of their troops may be depended upon to do the rest.

Haiti's Outbreak.

Haiti furnishes another example of the constant danger to the serenity of American diplomacy that is inherent in the irresponsible governments of the West Indies, Central and South America. Haiti happens to be suffering from financial depression which is charged to complications with a foreign bank at Port au Prince, but is more likely due to the turbulence and shiftlessness of the Haitiens themselves. By way of venting their spleen a number of Haitiens, including several members of the palace guard, stoned the carriages of the French and German ministers and their ladies as they drove past the palace. Minister Duprez of France was injured and has cabled a formal complaint to his government. It is authoritatively stated in Paris that France will take vigorous measures to secure satisfaction, as well it may.

France may take any measures it pleases, short of conquest and occupation of the territory, without interference from the government at Washington. But there is the trouble. If France cannot enforce its demands without making war, will it be content at the end of a campaign with a mere apology and nominal indemnity? If not, it has no recourse but to seize the Haitien territory and that is forbidden by the Monroe doctrine. Out of consideration for the United States France will not do this. America can have no sympathy with the irresponsible governments which bring trouble upon themselves by such disgraceful conduct as that at Port au Prince. Americans have no desire to save those governments from merited punishment, but they cannot permit any foreign power to go the length of taking American territory in payment of claims. The logical sequence is that the United States must, sooner or later, take up the duty of exercising supervision over the irresponsibles. It must do police duty in its "sphere of influence."

A Blunt Russian Editor.

If all Russian editors are as bluntly outspoken as Prince Oukahtomsky, publisher of the St. Petersburg Viedomosti, it's no wonder that their government suppresses them. What's the use of Muscovite diplomats sitting up nights to manufacture pleasant things for foreign consumption if Russian newspaper men shall be allowed to print facts? Prince Oukahtomsky has been touring this country and is now about to start for home. On the eve of his departure he contributes to The Independent an amazingly frank article on the eastern situation. He declares that Russia will not only crush Japan, but will also take a large slice of China to pay the expenses of the war. This little matter attended to, the bear will demand a reckoning from England who, the prince asserts, is undoubtedly responsible for Japan's attack on Russia. The form which this reckoning will take, Oukahtomsky confides, will be an expedition against India, and when the British have been driven out of that country the White Czar will reign in Asia from sea to sea.

The prince is a gentleman of the bedchamber to the Russian emperor, and is said to enjoy the czar's personal confidence and friendship. It is quite likely that he has boldly voiced the secret ambitions and councils of the Russian court. But even if these frankly avowed intentions be nothing more than braggadocio, how refreshing it is to read them after all the slippery and elaborately worded "statements" that have issued from the press bureau of Muscovite diplomacy. Of course, the article will find its way to Russian officialdom and one will wait with interest to see what will happen to the prince when he gets home. Only a few days ago it was reported that his paper had been threatened with suppression and its editor with exile because of certain things that had been published in it. It looks as though the outspoken prince might really be on his way for a through passage to Siberia.

"Parker, Gray, Gorman, Bryan, Harmon, Hearst, Wall, Olney, Cockrell, McClellan, Marshall Field, Daniel, Towne, Cockran, Cleveland—a splendid list from which to select a Democratic nominee—and a winner," says the Indianapolis Sentinel. Talked of in Gotham

By GEORGE C. JENKS.

[By Private Wire to The Gazette.]

NEW YORK, June 23.—Ex-Mayor Seth Low was at the city hall today. He spent most of the day going about the city renewing his acquaintanceship with people and things which were familiar enough to him before he deserted for his holiday tour of Europe, but which had grown dim in his memory in the maze of antique and other features which are the strong attractions of the Old World to American travelers. The coming home of Mr. Low brings to mind the encomiums bestowed upon him as a public speaker by no less a person than "Tay Pay" O'Connor, the brilliant editor of "M. A. P." In his paper Mr. O'Connor speaks of Mr. Low as a splendid example of the eloquent American, who in an afternoon speech can be depended on to use standard oratory, clear, decisive and simple, and always hitting the mark. Comparing it with the halting utterance that is regarded as the respectable and proper thing in British speakers, Mr. O'Connor said that the speech made by Mr. Low at a luncheon in the latter's honor in London "was even better than I expected." To this he added: "I have rarely heard a speech which at once showed the power as speakers that America has, or that brought out more clearly the essential difference between American methods of thought and of expression. For just about half an hour, you heard a man speak lowly and deliberately and yet without a break. You got a sense of ease and mastery in him, as though he were some very fine pianist or violinist playing on an instrument that he loved and that he had perfectly mastered. It was spoken in a somewhat subdued key and yet it was very eloquent, full of vim, fine imagery and a curious combination at once of reserve and of what is almost daring illustration." This is good to read as the opinion of a shrewd Irishman who is thoroughly conversant with British ideas. Mr. Low is a good orator, as all New Yorkers know. It seems he impressed people on the other side as favorably as he did his fellow-citizens at home.

More About Our Winning Way.

Mr. O'Connor has something to say about golf, too, that is of living interest in Pittsburgh, as well as New York. After declaring that Americans are wonderful in many ways, he goes on, speaking from the point of view of a Britisher: "Surely it is wonderful that they should have snatched from us the golf championship. It is not, I believe, 10 years since golf was introduced into America; I don't think it was even known by name 21 years ago, when I first visited that country. And now, just a decade after it has become familiar with golf, America sends us a champion who can beat men trained in a country where golf has been a public pastime for centuries. The effects on America have been remarkable. When I first knew the American, he took no exercise at all: bolted his lunch in 10 minutes and was never at rest from the time he got up in the morning till he went to bed at night. Golf has revolutionized this state of things; at least in some portions of the population. A well-known American publisher told me—I suppose it was half joke, half earnest—that golf had added two inches to the American chest measurement."

Gossip About Winning Ticket.

Of course, everyone here tonight is talking about the work done at the national Republican convention today. It cannot be said that there is excitement over the fact that Theodore Roosevelt was nominated for president of the United States. If a "dark horse" had been sprung, and put through to the defeat of the president, there would have been something to talk about and discuss violently. As it is, there could not be any other result than was reached, in the general opinion. The proceedings at Chicago were entirely lacking in the element of surprise; hence there is only a general gossip on the matter, with nothing to give it any spice. Possibly there will be more fun when the Democrats get into the game at St. Louis after the Fourth.

Not Decorative Structure.

It is true, as has been said by more than one New Yorker in my hearing, that the city hall does not lend itself well to decoration. It is draped in black, in token of grief for the loss of life on the General Slocum, but it does not look as handsome as when it is in its ordinary condition, allowing its handsome architectural lines to be seen without interference. Still, the sentiment is good and no one finds fault with the draping of the representative building of the municipal government.

Playwright Garey on Broadway.

James R. Garey, the Pittsburgh playwright, has just come to Broadway after several weeks' stay at Mt. Clemens, Mich. He was troubled with rheumatism, but says now that he is entirely well and rejuvenated.

"Bim" Enhances His Reputation.

"Bim, the button man," has a reputation for political prescience which seems to be warranted by events. A month ago he predicted that the Republican national ticket would be "Roosevelt and Fairbanks," and he had the courage of his convictions, for he had many thousands of buttons with those names on them, made and sent throughout the country. Many buttons are on the lapels of convention people in Chicago now. He predicted "McKinley and Hobart" when that pair ran for the highest offices of the land.

Strike Looks Like Short One.

The strike of the clothing cutters is not over, but there is a feeling that it will not last long. At least that is the supposed feeling of the employes. Unfortunately, every strike has that peculiarity of perfect confidence on the part of the strikers and equal certainty with the employers that the whole thing will fizzle out. It looks in this case, however, as if the difficulty might be adjusted without much trouble, because there is not such a wide breach between the two parties as has been the case in other strikes of late.

New Place for Roof Gardens.

Roof gardens on bridge towers is the latest suggestion in the way of free summer pleasure recreation for New Yorkers. It is proposed to make such gardens on the four great towers supporting the new Manhattan bridge across the East river. The prospect is an alluring one. Let us hope it will be put through. It is only a suggestion at present.

The Quiet Observer

By ERASMUS WILSON.

How are your boys coming up?

No doubt they are getting along with their school work all right, but how are they coming up?

That's different, likewise more important, for schooling is rather bad for an ill reared boy.

The fact is that schooling, even of the highest grade, will not make a good man. At very best it can only increase the usefulness of those who have good in them and have been well reared and carefully disciplined.

It does seem that a great many who pass as sensible, reasonable people, are possessed with the erroneous notion that schooling is the whole thing in fitting out boys. And acting upon this parents have toiled early and late and denied themselves many comforts of life in order to send boys to college who should have been given trades. And great has been their disappointment at their failure at the bar, and in other professions.

There is more in the rearing of a boy than in educating him, for if he is properly reared he will develop into a good man; and should he strongly desire higher schooling he will find a way to get it.

Many there be who are not getting on very well in the world who lay their failure to the want of a good education. If they are certain of this why don't they turn in and educate themselves? It is never to late to learn.

* * * * *

So, how are your boys coming up?

No doubt they are well dressed and well up on baseball and the like, all of which are well enough in their way, but they won't count for much in the makeup of a man for the times.

Go ask successful business men what they regard as the better qualifications for a boy who is expected to amount to something in the world.

In practically every instance they will say a good home training in manners, cheerful obedience, respect for their elders and their employers, industrious habits and a fair common school education.

You may be surprised to find that almost invariably education is last on the list of essential qualifications, not that it is not essential, but that without the others it is of very little practical use.

It isn't what a man knows of books and about strange things, but the things he can do that counts, and the better he can do them the greater the count.

It is barely possible that we are banking too much on our schools. They are great, no doubt, but they never can take the place of home training. Nor do they take the place of it, for boys and girls are about what their homes have made them, their school training notwithstanding.

How are your boys coming up, anyway?

* * * * *

Dear Quiet Observer:—You are our mentor, so to speak, and we are your flock; we follow as you lead, so lead us in straight paths.

We have talked oft of young folks and their ways, wise and otherwise, good, bad and indifferent.

You have uttered timely council, and yet that is but pruning the branches. Let us strike at the evil root.

Some sage has said something to the effect that if you want to make a good man or woman begin at the grandmother.

You may smile, but that has the right logic. A bitter spring cannot give forth sweet waters. The selfish parents and loveless homes of today are responsible for many of the faults and follies of the youth they send forth.

As a rule, parents and children do not draw near enough to each other in true friendship or comradarie, and so drift early apart from all confidential relationship.

How many mothers know all their young daughters' secrets and how many fathers are the receptacle of confidences from growing sons, or are their trusted advisors?

A short time since I was in a friend's home, and the young son, (man-grown in size, but only 16 in years,) came in, and after a few minutes went went to his father's side and putting his arms around his shoulders, sat down on his knee with a look that said, "Father, I love you, I know you love me. We understand and trust each other; we are chums."

Does not every fiber of your paternal heart reach out after such a son, and such a union of spirit? Many fathers would gasp with surprise should their sons do such things.

In the mad rush for money, let us stop long enough to remember that there are some things, yea, the best of things of life that our millions cannot buy. After a lifetime of selfish, sordid, money-gathering, many fathers would give a fortune for a son like my friend's, but can only lament, like the careless one in the Bible who was intrusted with the safe keeping of a man, saying, "As I was busy here and there, the young man escaped me and he is gone."

If you would have your children rise up and call you blessed, begin early, and strive always to be to them the one loving, interested, unselfish friend.

Your life is the model to which your child shapes all its actions. As you sow, so shall you also reap. As the price of companionship in maturity and in age, you must give life long love, and devotion, and make many sacrifices of self and give your time and constant attention in their early childhood and growing youth.

Live yourself the life you want them to live when they are men and women.

Bishop Vincent once pithily remarked that he and his young son were a mutual admiration society.

Such ought to be the status of all true sons and fathers.

Dear Quiet Observer, give the parents at least one square cornered talk. It will be good for them and they need it. NAOMI.

Wilkinsburg, Pa.

P.S.—They say the best points of a woman's letter are in the P. S., so here is a chunk of concentrated wisdom:

"Young man, if you want a good wife, hunt up some good mother and marry one of her daughters. Anyone will do."

* * * * *

That's all right.

No doubt there are a good many such mothers, a great many in fact, but there are others, and these have daughters who are fair to look upon and that's about the best that can be said of them.

There is no better way, perhaps, by which to detect a good daughter than by noting the respectful regard she has for her mother. And you can always size a man up by the way he treats his mother.

If you have a gray-haired mother
In the old home far away,
Sit down and write the letter
You put off day by day.
Don't wait until her tired steps
Reach heaven's pearly gate,
But show her that you think of her
Before it is too late.

If you've a tender message,
Or a loving word to say,
Don't wait till you forget it,
But whisper it today.
Who knows what bitter memories
May haunt you if you wait?
So make your loved one happy
Before it is too late.

We live but in the present,
The future is unknown;
Tomorrow is a mystery,
Today is all our own.
The chance that fortune leads to us
May vanish while we wait,
So spend your life's rich pleasure
Before it is too late.

The tender word unspoken,
The letters never sent,
The long-forgotten messages,
The wealth of love unspent,
For these some hearts are breaking,
For these some loved ones wait;
So show them that you care for them
Before it is too late.

—New World.

America and Americans.

No suspicion of jingoism nor of an assumption of that to which we are not as a people entitled can attach to the action of Secretary Hay in directing that our embassies, legations and consulates in foreign lands shall hereafter be called "American." So far as official titles on office papers, escutcheons and seals can go to establish an accurate and rational designation, the state department has determined to go, and American diplomatic officials will no longer be put in the absurd position of claiming a special and exclusive use of the words "United States," a phrase which, as a prefix, belongs as well to Brazil, or Mexico, or Venezuela, or Colombia.—Philadelphia Ledger.

On the Platform

There is nothing startling in the platform. It is neither radical nor is it weak. It makes no promises that will not be kept. It is such a platform as Theodore Roosevelt desires to stand upon, and upon it he will be elected.—Cleveland Leader (Rep.).

No voter can be deceived or buncoed by the Chicago platform of 1904. It is clear, open and unambiguous. It invites a sober and unprejudiced verdict on the record it summarizes and the principles it announces; and it invites that verdict with serene and settled confidence.—New York Tribune.

The Republican party has no apologies to make for any of its acts since it took charge of the national government. It is content to stand upon its record, and if that is what is meant by "stand pat," it is prepared to adopt that designation. Such is the significance of the Chicago platform, and as meaning just that, it will be both understood and heartily approved by the American people.—Philadelphia Inquirer (Rep.).

The interested priciples and the sordid convictions which dictate the tariff planks of Republican platforms are abhorred by right-thinking men, but we confess to another emotion than that of abhorrence. It is the emotion of pity for the intellectual pauperism of men as to whom the assumption is permitted that they are both able and educated, who feel obliged to repeat year after year that stale and offensive dictum that if a Republican protective tariff should ever stand in need of readjustment the work of revision "cannot safely be committed to any other hands than those of the Republican party."—New York Times (Dem.).

The platform closes with a characterization of the personality and work of the president. Parties are greater than presidents. Tendencies and purposes are greater than individuals. But the Republican party can rest on the achievements of President Roosevelt, and on them confidently appeal for his re-election.—Philadelphia Press (Rep.).

The platform adopted by the Republican national convention is fundamentally Bourbon. Nothing has been forgotten and nothing has been learned. All the achievements of the past are tagged, catalogued and enumerated, but the future played so trivial a part in the deliberations of the convention that it was all but disregarded.—New York World (Dem.).

The platform put forth by the Republican party at Chicago may be readily divided into two parts (1) Brag as to what has been accomplished by the party instrumentality in the past—only in part justified by historical fact. (2) Promises of what it will do in the future—that may be only safely taken with allowance for past failure.—Philadelphia Record (Dem.).

The plank which marks the most pronounced difference between the two parties is the declaration in favor of reducing the representation of states which restrict in an unconstitutional manner the elective franchise. This has the old true ring and is a triumph of principle over the policy of time-serving. The Democratic party does not believe in manhood suffrage.—Buffalo Express (Rep.).

The Republican party in these declarations says nothing which is calculated to strain its relations with the protected interests and the trusts. Nobody in Wall street will be frightened by its benevolent platitudes. The party, on the showing made in its platform, is so truly good that the American people cannot help keeping it in power. If, however, it should find it necessary to make friends of the "Mammon of Unrighteousness" there is nothing in its outgivings about the trusts and the tariff which should make the aforesaid Mammon feel lukewarm or resentful. It is a very adroit platform, as well as a very self-righteous one.—Baltimore Sun (Ind.-Dem.).

The Republican platform is such as to reassure every class of citizens except the dishonest ones. And the best part of its assurances is that they are backed up by the party's promise-keeping history and by the personal integrity of the unassailable head of the ticket—Theodore Roosevelt.—Baltimore American (Rep.).

The Republican platform, prepared so carefully in Washington and guarded so solicitously in Chicago, is the narrowest of partisan bigotry. Unalloyed pharisaism would be mild characterization of it. The darkest of the dark ages would have been the only logical period for its evolution.—Louisville Courier Journal (Dem.).

A pleasant task confronted the men who drew up the platform of 1904 for the Republican party. In telling what the party stands for today they were obliged to recount some of the great things which it did yesterday and the day before, back to a time beyond the recollection of many of the men in the convention. All this furnishes many of the most inspiring chapters of American history.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat (Rep.).

He Knew They Would Fit.

A Mississippi congressman once owned a handsome pair of light gray trousers which were much admired by his colored neighbors. Unfortunately they became spotted.

"Here, Charlie," said the congressman to a negro servant who had long coveted them, "take these trousers and clean them."

Charlie took them home, and after two days of careful inactivity brought them back.

"'Scuse me, boss," he said, "but 'claih to gracious, seem like Ah cain't git dat spot out no way."

"Did you brush it?"

"Yassch."

"Scrub it?"

"Yassch."

"Scour it?"

"Yasseh. 'Fear like Ah done ev'ything, but Ah jes' cain't git it out no way."

"Well, did you try ammonia?"

"No, seh! No, seh!" exclaimed Charlie, with a delighted snicker. "Ah didn't try 'em on me yit, seh, but Ah knows dey'd fit!"—New Orleans Picayune.

Kansas Rhetoric.

"When," says Bent Murdock, "the primordial, atomic, chimpanzee-fied, up-country globules begin the agitation of the filigreed and bedizened ornamentation of their bediamitic imaginations, in the belief that they are working out the substratum of cold facts in connection with state politics, they but emphasize the declaration that great men are not always wise, neither do the aged understand wisdom." Which is true; only too true! But the more important thing is that Kansas has a newspaper with courage enough to put the facts straight to the people without either filigreed, bedizened ornamentation or bediamitic imaginings.—Kansas City Journal.

PERSONALS

Jacob Aull of Baltimore passed through the city last night on his way home from a tour of Canada and the western states. He is a jobber of farm implements and has studied the conditions of the steel market and the grain crops. He said: "There is no denying the fact that the crops have been delayed and in part ruined by the late spring, the excessive rains and the little sunshine. While rain is essential for growing cereals, yet it is of little advantage unless the sun shines strongly to draw the substance from the ground into the stalks. I am convinced that crops this year will be 10 to 15 per cent less than last year's, particularly due to the unfavorable weather. Less wheat was planted this season than last, but indications are there will be sufficient to supply the demands. The farmers are buying little machinery, they having equipped their farms during the past two years. I think there will be a revival in all kinds of business next year, which will last at least four more years."

Frank C. Smith, proprieter of the Colonial hotel, arrived home yesterday from an European tour. He visited all the principal cities and inspected the large hotels with a view of obtaining ideas.

P. McSteen of Pittsburgh left last night for Ireland. He was appointed delegate to the Gaelic society international convention which begins in Ireland June 29. He intended the most prominent figure of the campaign. George B. Cortelyou made his way quietly to a seat on the platform. He was kept busy shaking hands with the party magnates there, but was not recognized by the audience.

Exactly at 10:27 by the convention hall clock Speaker Cannon's gavel fell with a resounding thump and the convention was called to order. The Rev. Thaddeus A. Snively, rector of St. Chrysostoms church, delivered the prayer. He stood at the front of the platform and read it from notes, the audience all standing. His voice was almost inaudible. A reading clerk then read an invitation to attend the fiftieth anniversary of the Republican party, to be celebrated at Jackson, Mich., July 6. Then with another swing of his gavel, Chairman Cannon announced that the next order of business would be calling the roll of the states for the nomination of president of the United States.

There was a hum of expectancy from throughout the hall as the stentorian voice of the reading clerk called "Alabama." Oscar A. Hundley of that state mounted a chair and in a voice which successfully penetrated the huge space announced that Alabama requested the honor and privilege of yielding its place on the roll to the state of New York.

Immediately the whole New York delegation rose to its feet, waving flags and huzzaing. There were shouts of "Black, Black," and someone from the audience seats in the rear shouted "Three cheers for young Abe Lincoln." The New York delegates kept waving their flags and cheering as ex-Gov. Black ascended the platform. It was a sight to see such dignified gentlemen as Senator Depew, President Butler of Columbia university and other solid men vigorously brandishing the flags with which all the members of the delegation had provided themselves. The Alaska totem pole which had settled in the ranks of the delegation was raised aloft as if the eagle on its top was flying away with it.

Cannon Got Order.

Chairman Cannon motioned for order, and escorting Gov. Black to the front, introduced him in a few emphatic sentences. Gov. Black was a very striking figure as he stood in his conspicuous position. The platform had been protracted out toward the audience so that the speaker did not seem to be upon the platform itself, but upon a rostrum. He is tall and spare, with strongly marked features. He wore a red flower in his buttonhole of his frock coat and in one hand he brandished an unfolded white handkerchief. His voice, while not strong, had good carrying power and as soon as he warmed up a bit he could be heard distinctly. His enunciation was deliberate and his epigrammatic sentences evoked frequent laughter and applause. His speech was full of good hits, which tickled the audience. He spoke for 25 minutes and it was just 11:06 o'clock when he pronounced the nominating words.

The scene that followed was like the crash of thunder which follows the lightning flash. One vast roar of applause went up from the great assemblage. The flourishing of handkerchiefs in the galleries seemed to put them all in motion like wind ripples across a wheat field. The delegates were waving flags, and hats or anything that came handy. The West Virginia delegates unfurled red, white and blue umbrellas bearing pictures of Roosevelt and Fairbanks. The cheering and shouting went on in a series of swells, something happening to renew its force at intervals. The band was booming away for all it was worth, but nobody could hear it and only the performers knew what they were playing.

Chairman Cannon advanced to the front of the platform waving a large old silk flag. It is a historic relic, as it was waved in the convention which nominated Lincoln. It is the property of the Lincoln-McKinley association of Missouri, and was brought by the Missouri delegation. There was a tremendous swell of applause when the historic flag was displayed. Then from some quarter or another a colossal picture of Roosevelt was borne into the hall by three men and shown on the platform and later carried about.

Another Wild Outburst.

There was another wild outburst of cheering, and now at last the band made itself heard with the thrilling strains of "The Star Spangled Banner," and in every direction the audience joined in singing. One splendid ovation after another followed in quick succession. A young man with a megaphone and a flag sprang to the front of the platform. As he swung the banner from side to side he shouted the name, "Roosevelt." At each swing of the flag the name was repeated. It was soon taken up by the delegates in front, spread to those in the rear, and in a twinkling the whole assemblage was shouting "Roosevelt," "Roosevelt," in a measured unison. The young man who started the cry was J. H. Smythe, Jr., of Philadelphia.

A little girl clad entirely in white was lifted high on the shoulders of some of the California delegates and the first sound of her childish treble was the signal for another outburst.

A delegate requested Chairman Cannon to loan him the large flag he had carried and with a smile the chairman handed it down. Around the hall it went, followed by a long line of shouting delegates. California, with its great banner of purple, white and gold, came marching down the center aisle followed by senators, members of congress and others prominent in the life of the national capital, trooping along behind, shouting, laughing and cheering. The New York delegation, catching sight of Henry C. Payne on the platform, paid him a brief and especial tribute and then returned once more to the cheering of the candidate, shouting "Roosevelt," "Roosevelt," "Roosevelt," "New York," over and over again.

A small colored boy, James Blaine Cassun, of Georgia, with long curling hair, was hoisted upon the platform and he waved a small national flag. Louise Roberts, a young girl who had created the enthusiasm in the California delegation, was next carried up and borne high on the shoulder of a stalwart delegate from Indiana. She created a new uproar of enthusiasm as she tossed her flag to and fro.

Tumult Lasts 23 Minutes.

Little Naomi Da Foe of Alpena, Mich., followed for a brief period and when she waved her flag Chairman Cannon pushed to the front and saying, "Please let me in, my dear," rapped vigorously for order.

This tumult lasted for exactly 23 minutes. It reminded one of some great pyrotechnic exhibition in which just as one feature was fizzing low a new one burst out with a whiz and a roar. It might have lasted longer, but Chairman Cannon began swinging his long arms like flails, motioning for order. He was too far out on the platform to be able to reach a table with his gavel, so at last he pounded on the floor. This spectacle made the convention laugh, and the Roosevelt demonstration was over, but it took at least five minutes more to get the delegates back into their seats and resume the regular order.

When quiet was restored the secretary read a history of the flag which Mr. Cannon had waved. Waving it above his head, Mr. Cannon shouted: "It prophesied victory in 1860; it has been baptized upon many a battlefield since, and it is safe in the hands of President Roosevelt."

Thus concluded the great scene of the convention. There were numerous outbursts of applause and scenes of great enthusiasm as succeeding speakers addressed the convention, but none to equal that attending the nomination of Roosevelt.

Senator Beveridge of Indiana, who made the first seconding speech, made a great hit with the convention. He has the true orator's voice, the high, clear tone, which appears to pierce the farthest recess without effort. Every syllable of his eloquent and witty address was distinctly heard.

George A. Knight of California came next. As he went up to the platform his delegation gave the old stage coach yell, "Wahoo-oo-oo," and the state banner and a huge wreath of flowers was borne along as an escort.

Made Himself Heard.

Mr. Knight is a big man who looks like the pictures of Robert G. Ingersoll, and he has a voice like Ingersoll and a flow of picturesque oratory like Ingersoll. There was a shout of delight as he uttered the first words, "Gentlemen of the convention," for that voice of his seemed as loud as Gabriel's trumpet. It has been so hard to hear that the audience relished the change. An ironical shout came from the end of the hall, "Not so loud," and there was a general shout of laughter. Mr. Knight not only made everybody hear him, but he had plenty worth hearing.

The next speaker, Harry Stillwell Edwards of Georgia, was not effective. His voice did not reach through the hall and to most his effort was merely dumb show. The audience got decidedly restless before he had finished.

Ex-Gov. Bradley made a good speech, with special reference to the sufferings of southern Republicans. He was followed by Joseph B. Cotton of Minneapolis, a young man who spoke in good voice, but the audience was now tired of oratory and showed it.

There was one more speaker, however, a colored man, Harry S. Cummings of Baltimore. He made a decided hit with the convention by his natural gifts as an orator and his tact. His clear, melodious voice easily filled the hall and his gesticulation was easy and graceful. He spoke briefly and to the point and won hearty applause.

The roll was then called for the announcement of the votes. State after state cast a unanimous vote for Theodore Roosevelt until New Jersey was reached, when Gov. Murphy of that state asked unanimous consent to declare the result by acclamation. There were cries of "No, no," all over the hall, and he withdrew the motion.

The call proceeded to the end, whereupon Chairman Cannon announced that Theodore Roosevelt had received the entire vote of the convention—994—and had been unanimously nominated for president of the United States. There was another outburst, which lasted for several minutes, and might have gone on, but Chairman Cannon nipped it by shouting that nominations for vice president were coming in order and directing the clerk to call the roll.

FAIRBANKS NOMINATED FOR VICE PRESIDENT

withdraw its candidate, John W. Webster, and Missouri and Colorado did not consider it worth while to present their favorite sons.

The chairman of the Georgia delegation announced that they had been instructed to vote for a son of that state for vice president, but under the circumstances they would fall into line for Fairbanks. The Georgia boom had evidently not progressed far as nobody seemed to know that the state had a candidate.

Senator Depew moved that the calling of the roll be dispensed with and that the nomination of Senator Fairbanks be made by acclamation.

Cannon Escaped Nomination.

"Is there any objection?" yelled Chairman Cannon. "The chair hears none. The motion is carried and it only remains for the chair to announce that the nomination of Charles W. Fairbanks of Indiana has been made unanimously by acclamation."

And thus "Uncle Joe" Cannon escaped the vice presidential nomination. He has feared for months that the party might draft him for the ticket, and he had stated in no uncertain terms that he is satisfied with his place as speaker of the house, and that under no circumstances would he accept the nomination for vice president. After he had headed off the revival of the boom that was started here last Saturday, Mr. Cannon felt pretty sure there would be no further danger of it springing up, but he doubtless drew a breath of relief as he made the announcement that Fairbanks had been nominated unanimously by acclamation under a suspension of the rules.

The announcement was accompanied by more cheering, and the important work of the convention having been disposed of, a great many of the spectators and delegates left the hall, which was very hot and oppressive. The remainder of the work consisted of the appointment of the notification committees and the passage of a number of resolutions, after which Chairman Cannon, at 4 p. m., announced the adjournment of the convention sine die.

SPORTS FOR YOUNGSTERS.

One of the features of the Orphans' picnic to be held at Calhoun park July 13 and 14, will be the athletic contests. While these will be for the youngsters who attend the annual outing the prizes will be attractive. The program consists of dashes, hurdle and jumping races, while for the fat men there will be a special dash. The goat races this year are also attracting interest. The Rev. Father Lynch, in charge of the Idlewood institution, has received many letters from boys in the Pittsburgh diocese regarding these races, and he expects to make some announcement at the meeting Sunday night.

During the two days of the picnic the Pittsburgh Railways Company announces it will run as many cars as necessary to carry people to Calhoun park, the cars leaving Fourth avenue and Wood street at intervals of one minute, the same schedule being arranged for Homestead, Braddock, McKeesport, Duquesne and other towns in the Monongahela valley.

At Sunday night's meeting at the Lyceum, Washington street, General Chairman T. A. Dunn will announce details of the free trip and free lot plans, and the names of those who will serve on the committees.

Y. M. C. A. BOYS ARE PREPARING FOR CAMP

Members of the Young Men's Christian Association of Western Pennsylvania, between the ages of 12 and 15, inclusive, will hold their second annual boys' state camp at Avonia, Pa., on the shores of Lake Erie, from July 6 to July 20. For boys from the Pittsburgh district the entire expense, including car fare, will be $11 25 for two weeks. Special cars will be provided to carry the campers and their belongings. The camp will be in charge of Charles N. Ramsey and 17 assistants. Over 100 boys went to camp last year. The camp committee is composed of W. K. Brown, Robert L. Wickline, E. G. Ackerman and E. B. Rankin.

leader, who like the chevalier of France is without fear and without reproach, seconds the nomination for the vice presidency of Charles W. Fairbanks of Indiana.

Governor Pennypacker was frequently interrupted by applause, and when he concluded Pennsylvania accorded him an ovation.

A number of the Pennsylvania delegates were missing this morning when the convention was called to order. For a time it was thought that Senator Flinn of Pittsburgh, was not present, but he was finally discovered occupying a seat with the Arkansas delegation. Representative Thomas L. Kennedy of Beaver county, had a seat with the Indiana delegation.

Col. Church Had a Megaphone.

When ex-Gov. Black named Theodore Roosevelt as the candidate for president, all of the Pennsylvanians stood on their chairs, cheered and waved handkerchiefs, hats and flags. Col. Church, of Pittsburgh, had smuggled a megaphone into the convention and he and Mayor Weaver of Philadelphia, took turns in announcing the praises of the state for Roosevelt. Congressman John Dalzell had a flag which he kept in motion for nearly 20 minutes. Gov. Pennypacker stood on his chair and clapped his hands. Senator Penrose fanned himself and enjoyed the enthusiasm.

When the parade of states started Pennsylvania soon sent her standard into the procession. The marchers were headed by three men carrying a huge picture of the president, and the route the enthusiastics covered took in the entire first floor of the Coliseum.

Mr. Cotton, a young orator from Duluth, was far down on the list of speechmakers, and the convention was tiring of oratory. In a clear voice he announced: "I will take but a moment of your time." Unfortunately he did not stick to his promise, and Pennsylvania delegates had to finally join in a general uproar which swept the Minnesota orator from the stage.

Penrose Announced Vote.

H. S. Cummings, a Maryland negro, made the closing speech, and did it well. He was brief and to the point. When he concluded Col. Church jumped on his chair and started to cheer, and in an instant every Pennsylvania delegate had joined in the ovation.

When the roll call of states was called some of the chairmen made little speeches in announcing their votes for Roosevelt. Chairman Penrose said:

"Pennsylvania casts her 68 votes for Theodore Roosevelt," and the delegation gave three cheers for the president.

Pennsylvania and Indiana were seated side by side in the convention. When Senator Dolliver of Iowa named Senator Fairbanks of Indiana as the vice presidential candidate, Pennsylvania led off with the cheering. After seconding speeches had been made by Senators Depew and Foraker, Gov. Pennypacker was introduced.

Pennsylvania has been well represented at the convention. There were between 500 and 600 Republicans from the state in attendance. The task of finding seats for them fell upon Col. W. R. Andrews, private secretary to Senator Penrose, and secretary of the Republican state committee. When the crowd arrived Col. Andrews had but 10 tickets to divide, but he knows how to do things. Every Pennsylvanian was gotten into the convention and all of them are well pleased with their treatment.

WILLIAMS.

President Roosevelt will go to Oyster Bay on July 2 and will receive the official notification of his nomination there on July 27. Then he will return to Washington for a short time and after that will again go to Oyster Bay. The time he is at Oyster Bay will be unmarked by political conferences of an extended character, although he will be frequently in consultation with Mr. Cortelyou, chairman of the national committee.

The Indiana delegation in the house of representatives this afternoon sent this dispatch from Chicago to President Roosevelt:

"The members of the Indiana delegation in the house of representatives congratulate you upon the unanimity and enthusiasm of your nomination. Roosevelt and Fairbanks will receive the electoral vote of Indiana in November."

"Your unanimous nomination pleases West Virginia mightily. Republicans of this state unitedly supported your nomination from the very start. Triumphant election and the West Virginia electoral vote assured."

creased for the individual if he cared to take one or more persons in with him. The headquarters occupied by Secretary Wesley R. Andrews of the Pennsylvania state Republican committee, three rooms and a bath, cost $60 a day. These were also the headquarters of State Chairman Penrose. One thousand five hundred dollars was paid for the use of Music hall, where the Pennsylvania delegates caucused, and this expense was increased about $200 for decorations, lighting and attendants.

Secretary Andrews was unable to attend the convention today. His time was fully occupied in supplying delegates and alternates with certificates entitling them to the free ride to St. Louis, where they will be guests of the world's fair commission. One hundred and nineteen of these certificates were issued. Col. Andrews will be obliged to remain here several days closing up matters connected with the convention. He will then go to Washington.

WILL KEEP DIFFERENTIAL.

Wabash Will Insist on Its Right to Rate Lower Than the Panhandle.

Definite determination on the part of the Wabash railroad to insist upon its right to the differential over the Panhandle on St. Louis world's fair traffic may bring on here one of the prettiest conflicts between the rival railroad lines that Pittsburgh has seen for some time. The announcement of the Wabash that it would put into effect on the day of opening, July 2, rates which are based on the $1.50 differential in the $15.75 one-way rate between Pittsburgh and St. Louis has made the other lines do considerable figuring.

If the Panhandle meets this rate, it is expected in some quarters that the Wabash will simply reduce its rates as before, in such a way that it still will have the differential advantage over that competitor. The other lines seem to be awaiting the actual opening of the Wabash and the formal and official announcement of the rates before taking any action.

It was said yesterday that an effort is being made to secure a meeting of the heads of the passenger traffic departments of the various lines here next Tuesday and Wednesday.

NO SCRAMBLING FOR GREAT HONOR

Senator Dolliver Says Office Sought Man in Case of Vice Presidency.

HE PAYS TRIBUTE TO QUAY

[By Associated Press to The Gazette.]

CHICAGO, June 23.—In presenting the name of Senator Charles W. Fairbanks of Indiana, for the nomination for vice president, Senator Jonathan P. Dolliver of Iowa said:

Gentlemen of the convention: The national Republican convention, now nearly ready to adjourn, has presented to the world a moral spectacle of extraordinary interest and significance. It is a fine thing to see thousands of men representing millions of people, fighting in the political arena for their favorite candidates, and contending valiantly for the success of contradictory principles and conflicting doctrines. Out of such a contest, with its noise and exclamation, its flying banners, its thunder of the captains and the shouting, the truth often secures vindication, and the right man comes out victorious. Sometimes, however, wisdom is lost in the confusion, and more than once we have seen the claims of leadership swallowed up in contention and strife.

We have the honor to belong to a convention whose constituency in every state and territory, and in the islands of the sea, has done its thinking in quiet fiesides, undisturbed by clamor of any sort, and has simplified our responsibilities by the unmistakable terms of the credentials which we hold at their hands.

At intervals for four years I followed the banner of James G. Blaine through the streets of our convention cities, from Cincinnati to Minneapolis, and did my full share to see that nobody got any more applause than the great popular leader who had captured my enthusiasm long before it was old enough to vote. Not even his fiercest sentence to dimluish the gold which our champion had upon the hearts of those who followed him, and it has required a good deal of experience to enable them to understand the lessons of his defeat. Other conventions have met to settle the fate of rival chieftains; we meet to record the judgment of the Republican millions of the United States.

Facts are Recognized.

They have based their opinion upon the facts of the case. They have not concluded that we have the greatest president of the United States since Washington. They know how to measure the height and depth of things better even than Professor Brice when he deals with the superlatives which find their way into all well regulated banquets after midnight. They have not forgotten the grave of Lincoln which has become a shrine for the pilgrimage of the human race. They remember still the day when the canon of Westminster opened the doors of that venerable monument to admit the name of the silent American soldier into the household of English spoken fame.

They have passed no vainglorious judgment upon the career of Theodore Roosevelt. They have studied it with sympathetic interest from his boyhood, as he has risen from one station of public usefulness to another, until at length, before the age of 45, he stands upon the highest civic eminence known among men. Their tears fell with his as he stood in the shadow of McKinley's death, and as a part of his oath of office, asked the trusted counsellors who stood by the side of the fallen president to help him carry forward the work which he had left unfinished and while his administration deserves the tribute which it received in the convention from the eloquent lips of our temporary chairman, it is because he has executed in a manly way the purpose of the Republican party and interpreted aright the aspirations of the American people. Nor can there be a doubt that, if the years to come, he shall walk steadfastly in the same path, he will be numbered among the great leaders of the people who have given dignity and influence to their highest office.

But the judgment of the Republican party is not only united upon its candidate—it is unanimous also upon the fundamental principles for which it stands. I think the convention has been fortunate in harmonizing the minor differences which unavoidably arise in a country like ours, where speech is free and where printing is free. We stand together on the proposition that the industrial system of the United States must not be undermined by a hostile partisan agitation, and that whatever changes are necessary in our laws ought to be made by the friends, or at least the acquaintances of the protective tariff system. The things upon which we are agreed are so great, and the things about which we differ are so small, that we will not without sacrificing sincere Republican convictions anywhere, to unite as one man in defense of our common faith.

Leaders Who are Gone.

The roll call of this convention is a reminder not without its melancholy suggestion, that the veterans of Republican leadership are transferring the responsibilities which they have borne, to the generation born since 1850. The children of the men who laid the foundations of the Republican party are here to begin the celebration of its fiftieth anniversary. A heavy hand has been laid, since we met at Philadelphia, upon the men who guided the counsels of the party. Nelson Dingley, whose name is associated in immortal reputation with the industrial and commercial miracles which opened the new century, is gone, and within the borders of the same state lies all that is mortal of Thomas B. Reed, who, at the end to anarchy in the American house of representatives, dear old Uncle Mark Hanna, whose face has looked down with the benediction of its friendship upon our deliberations, we shall see no more; within the past few deys we buried Mathew Stanley Quay in the bosom of the commonwealth which he loved, and which, in spite of the malice and calumny which pursued him while he lived, never withdrew in its affectionate confidence in him, while over the whole four years has hung the shadow of the national affliction which left the American people in sacredest grief.

We stand at the beginning of the new era, and while the Republican party leans upon the counsel of its old leaders, it has not hesitated to summon to the responsibilities of public life the young men who have been trained under their guidance to take up the burdens which they are ready to lay down, and finish the work which comes to them as an inheritance of patriotism and duty. That is the significance of the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt, and that is the explanation of the call which has been made by the Republican party without a dissenting voice upon Charles W. Fairbanks to stand by the side of the president in the guidance and leadership of the Republican party.

While he has not sought to constrain the judgment of the convention, directly or indirectly, he has kept himself free from the affection which undervalues the dignity of the personal office, and the gift of the American people, and I do not doubt that his heart has been touched by the voluntary expression of universal good will which has already chosen him as one of the standard-bearers of the Republican party in the United States. The office has sought the man, and he will bring to the office the commanding personality of a statesman equal to any of the great responsibilities which belong to our public affairs. A student of the senate champion of all the great policies which constitute the invincible record of the Republican party during the last 30 years, his name will become a new source of strength to the ticket, not only in his own state, but everywhere throughout the country. A man of affairs, the whole business community shares the confidence which his political associates have reposed in him from the beginning of his public life. The quiet, undemonstrative popular opinion which has given the Republican party a platform upon which all Republicans can stand without sacrificing sincere Republican convictions anywhere, to unite as one man in defense of our common faith.

AN ELOQUENT VOICE FROM THE SOUTH

HAS KEPT EVERY PROMISE

[By Associated Press to The Gazette.]

CHICAGO, June 23.—Harry Stillwell Edwards of Macon, Ga., eloquently seconded the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt. He said:

It is eminently fit and proper that a Georgian should sit this occasion second the eloquent speaker from New York, that the voice of the motherland should blend with the voice of the fatherland to declare that the destinies of America shall for four years more be entrusted to the great son born of the union of the two empire states.

I do not belittle the influence of a father when I say that if the iron in a son's nature be derived from him, the gold is coined from the heart of the mother whose lap has cradled him. And because I believe this, because the lesson at his mother's knee is the seed that sends a stalk toward heaven and opens far up its auxiliary blossoms in the morning light, because the lofty ideals of manhood are rooted deeper than youth, because that which a man instinctively would be he has been dreamed for him in advance by a mother, I claim for Georgia the larger share in the man you have chosen your leader.

The childhood of the good woman who bore him was cast near where the Atlantic flows in over the marsh and the sand. There she first built her a home in the greatness of God. Womanhood found her within the uplifting view of the mountains in a land over which the Almighty inverts a sapphire cup by day and sets His brightest stars on guard by night. And there, fellow-countrymen, the soul of your president was born. Those of us who know and love him each in the easy flow of his utterance, and feel in its largeness of thought and contempt of littleness the rhythm of the ocean on the Georgian sands and the spirit of the deep in his lofty ideals and hopefulness, in his fixedness of purpose and unchanging, rock-ribbed honesty we hear the mountains calling. In his daring, his impulsive courage, his unconquerable manhood, we see his great brother, the Georgia volunteer, in the hand-to-hand fights of the Wilderness, the impetuous rush up the heights of Gettysburg and the defiance of overwhelming odds from Chattanooga to Atlanta. We look on him as a Georgian abroad, and if in the providence of God it may be so we shall welcome him home some day, not as a prodigal son, who has wasted his manhood, but as one who on every field of endeavor has honored his mother and worn the victor's wreath.

Faithful to His Promise.

Coming into the position of the martyred McKinley, the youngest chief magistrate that has ever filled the presidential chair, without the privilege and advantage of preliminary discussion and consultation, he gave the country a pledge that he would carry out the policies of his predecessor. It was a masterstroke of genius, applauded alike north and south. His conception of the duties of his high office, as enunciated by him at Harvard, was "to serve all alike, well to act in a spirit of fairness and justice to all men; and to give each man his rights." He has kept this pledge; he has lived up to this fine conception of his duty. This pledge involved a completion of the work begun in Cuba, and an honorable discharge of the promises made to our struggling neighbor. The flag of an independent republic floats over Havana today, and all men know that we have kept faith with the Cuban people.

Leaving the details to engineers, he has cut as by a single stroke the Panama canal through mountains of prejudice and centuries of ignorance. In the far Philippines our flag floats, a guaranteen of redemption, pacification and development. His conception of duty has led him into difficult places in dealing with the internal affairs of our own country; he has met every issue bravely and ably and demonstrated not only that prompt and decided action is often the highest expression of conservatism, but that it is safe to trust the impulse of man who is essentially and instinctively honest.

Fellow countryman, after nearly four years of Theodore Roosevelt, we find the army and navy on a better footing, our trade expanded, the country at peace and prosperous and our flag respected in every quarter of the globe. The American people will not withhold from him the applause of manly hearts. I am proud that my state, the Empire state of the south, shares in the glory of his achievements, as it will share in their benefits.

Business Men in Line.

It is not pretended that the section from which I come to you is, as a section, in sympathy with your political party. But I am as sure as that I stand here that the great majority of intelligent business men in the south are in sympathy with the controlling principles of your platform and opposed to those of your opponents as last declared. And I am equally sure that they recognize and respect the fearless honesty of your leader. Headlines are not history, nor does the passionate partisan write the final verdict of a great people. History, despite the venom of the small politician, will do him the justice to record that he has gone further than any man who has occupied the White House since the civil war to further the vital interests of the south. The standard of appointments has been the same for Georgia as for New York.

He has insisted on efficiency and integrity as the chief tests, north and south alike. Of the thousand or more original postoffice appointments in Georgia under his administration not one has within my knowledge been criticised by even the unfriendly and partisan press of the state. A southern man, Gen. Wright, by his appointment holds the honor of this country in trust in the far Philippines, and on him your president relies for the advancement and development of the 7,000,000 people who are there working out their destinies. Two judges of first instance, one a Democrat and one a Republican, and both from Georgia, are there by his appointment to administer the laws. In the army there and here, in the navy, and in all the divisions of the civil government southern men have felt the friendly touch of his hand. The character of these appointments and the whole policy give the lie to those designing knaves who charge him with stirring up strife between races and arraying section against section. "I am proud of your great deeds, for you are my people!" This was his greeting to a southern audience, and no honest man doubts that he meant it.

South Shares Prosperity.

The south shares in the magnificent prosperity which our great country has achieved under the Republican party. Especially has she felt the beneficent effect of your policies during the last eight years; and the hardest fact your opponents have to contend with is the fact that your financial policy has been tested and found to be sound and efficient. They have sufficed for eight years at least, and the Democratic partisan who has twice in that time been led captive behind the silver car of Bryan must be optimistic beyond expression if he believes that the country will suffer alarm over the prospect of four years more of prosperity. The south leads in cotton goods, cottonseed products, coal, iron, oil and lumber, and business enterprises in connection with these and other industries have increased and multiplied. Traveling from Washington to Macon one is never off a first-class railroad nor long out of sight of the smoke of a mill.

The people who conduct these and kindred enterprises, who are raising cotton at from 10 to 16 cents a pound, wheat at from 75 cents to a dollar a bushel, whose coal, iron and lumber are in demand throughout the world, whose homes are well and safely insured, and whose lands are rapidly increasing in value, are not alarmed over the prospect of another Republican victory under Roosevelt. They are not alarmed over the digging of a canal at Panama that will give them direct communication with five or six hundred millions of people who need the products of their fields and factories. Nor are they alarmed that increased railway and river transportation will be required to move these products to southern ports, or that from these ports, under a Republican administration, yellow fever, the south's dread enemy, has been banished, millions saved annually to the taxpayer, and the business year raised from nine months to twelve.

The prosperity of the south is wrapped up in the policies of the Republican party, and the southern people are beginning to realize it. Southern business sentiment indicates an increasing distrust of the policies of the Democratic party. In 1896 Georgia, accustomed to enormous Democratic majorities, gave 94,000 votes for Bryan and 60,000 for McKinley. North Carolina cast 174,000 votes for Bryan and 155,000 for McKinley. Virginia gave 154,000 for Bryan and 135,000 for McKinley.

Believe In Roosevelt.

And this was according to Democratic counts. Maryland and West Virginia cast Republican majorities in both 1896 and 1900. In Virginia, Georgia and North Carolina in 1900 12 to 15 per cent of the people who had voted in 1896 stayed away from the polls and sacrificed their last opportunity to worship the "popular idol." An analysis of election returns shows that the distrust of Democracy was most pronounced and conspicuous in centers of trade, manufactures and commerce.

Fellow countrymen, we of the south believe in Roosevelt, and in his ability to meet every issue at home and abroad triumphantly. We believe that he is animated by a spirit of patriotism as broad and as bright as has ever streamed from the White House over our beloved country, and we believe that when he has fulfilled his mission, he, the son of the north and south, will carry with him the consciousness that fatherland and motherland, once divorced in sadness, through him and because of him have been drawn together again in the bonds of the old affection. And we believe that when he goes at length into the retirement of private life he will go beloved of all patriotic Americans from Canada to the gulf and from ocean to ocean. Mr. Chairman, in behalf of the motherland, I second the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt.

We don't talk about three-cent cigars—the kind you think we mean—but when we know we can show you in one minute that we are selling for three cents as good a cigar as can be produced and retailed for five cents in any way except through our system of buying and selling, then we are bound to tell about it.

We want everybody to know it. It's just an example of what our selling system does all along the line—rips out the old time "in-between" profits and expenses and saves it all to the consumer, and gives the smoker dependable cigars at the price the jobbers ordinarily pay.

Cupid Wins Against School Board Directors

The public school teachers of Versailles township will not have to promise to remain single for the entire year in order to secure positions. This decision has been reached by the board of directors after much deliberation. Cupid has been the cause of much trouble in the Versailles schools in former years, and the resolution to require teachers to promise to remain single for six months was defeated by a narrow margin.

SULLY SHIES QUESTIONS ABOUT WHO OWNS HOUSE

Cotton King Admits Presenting Daughter With Automobile in Which He Toured England.

[By Private Wire to The Gazette.]

NEW YORK, June 23.—Daniel J. Sully was questioned again today in the bankruptcy proceedings of the cotton firm of D. J. Sully & Company, before MacGrane Coxe, referee.

An effort was made by Assistant District Attorney Baldwin to obtain from Mr. Sully some statement which would clear away the doubt regarding the ownership of the house at No. 6 East Sixty-third street.

Mr. Sully appeared to be bored by the questions, and his replies were not very full of information. He would not swear that he had told the person from whom he purchased the house that he wished the deed drawn in Mrs. Sully's name, and he could not make it clear to his questioner how, if his wife owned the property, he had placed a mortgage on it for $82,000. The witness said there were several insurance policies on the house, and he admitted that he paid the premiums and was named as the beneficiary. Mr. Sully admitted that his wife held the strings of the domestic purse.

Mr. Baldwin drew from the witness that he had presented his daughter with the $5,000 Panhard automobile which he had purchased abroad, and which he brought to this city after having toured England and the continent in it. It was learned also that Mr. Sully owed a furrier $6,800 for furs purchased for Mrs. Sully. The witness told with smiles of his having engaged David G. Thompson, a cotton expert of Providence, at a salary of $12,600 a year for life and a bonus of $50,000 a year, to work up the economic development of the cotton industry in the south.

The hearing was adjourned until Monday, July 11.

PAYS $15,000 A YEAR FOR HER APARTMENTS

New Record Made in High Rents in New York by Miss Faith Moore.

[By Private Wire to The Gazette.]

NEW YORK, June 23.—Miss Faith Moore, seeking an apartment in which she might live in unostentatious style, has selected one of 15 rooms and five bath rooms at the hitherto unprecedented rental of $15,000 a year. The building, at No. 787 Fifth avenue, the entire sixth floor of which Miss Moore and her aunt are to occupy, will not be finished until August, and the decorations and furnishings will be completed next October. She saw many other flats before making her selection, but rejected them as too showy.

Several millions were her inheritance from her father, John Godfrew Moore, member of the firm of Moore & Schley, who died in 1895.

The highest known rent before the lease in question was $12,000, paid for one apartment in the Bolkenhayn. Double apartments in the Navarre bring $20,000, and there are suites in the Tiffany building, at Madison avenue and Seventy-second street, which rent from $8,000 to $10,000 a year. The Misses Calender and DeForest, who long lived in one of the Tiffany apartments, are said to have paid $10,000 a year.

FORMER GOV. BLACK PRESENTS THE MAGIC NAME OF ROOSEVELT

Contrasts Republican Harmony With Democratic Dissension and Incapacity.

HIGHEST TYPE OF AMERICAN

[By Associated Press to The Gazette.]

CHICAGO, June 23.—First on the roll call for nominations for president, Alabama accorded the honor of presenting the name of Theodore Roosevelt to New York. The pent-up enthusiasm could be no longer restrained, and when former Gov. Frank S. Black mounted the platform to make the nominating speech, the assemblage burst out with long and continued cheering. Gov. Black spoke as follows:

Mr. President and Gentlemen of the Convention:

We are here to inaugurate a campaign which seems already to be nearly closed. So wisely have the people sowed and watched and tended, there seems little now to do but to measure up the grain. They are ranging themselves not for battle but for harvest. In one column reaching from the Maine woods to the Puget sound are those people and those states which have stood so long together, that when great emergencies arise the nation turns instinctively to them. In this column, vast and solid, is a majority so overwhelming that the scattered squads in opposition can hardly raise another army. The enemy has neither guns nor ammunition, and if they had they would use them on each other.

Destitute of the weapons of effective warfare, the only evidence of approaching battle is in the tone and number of their bulletins. There is discord among the generals; discord among the soldiers. Each would fight in his own way, but before assaulting his Republican adversaries he would first destroy his own comrades in the adjoining tents. Each believes the opinions of the other absurd, not only wicked but fatal to the holder. That is true. This is the only war of modern times where the boomerang has been substituted for the gun.

Opposition in Hard Straits.

Whatever fatalities may occur, however, among the disordered hosts now moving on St. Louis, no harm will come this fall to the American people. There will be no opposition sufficient to raise a conflict. There will be hardly enough for competition. There are no Democratic plans for the conduct of the fall campaign. Their zeal is chiefly centered in discussion as to what Thomas Jefferson would do if he were living. He is not living, and but few of his descendants are among the Democratic remnants of today. Whatever of patriotism or wisdom emanated from that distinguished man is now represented in this convention.

It is a sad day for any party when its only means of solving living issues is by guessing at the possible attitude of a statesman who is dead. This condition leaves that party always a beginner and never gets beyond new. The Democratic party has seldom tried a problem on its own account, and when it has its blunders have been its only monuments, its courage is remembered only in regret. Long ago the Democratic party may serve as ballast, but it will never steer the ship.

When all the people have forgotten will dawn a golden era for this new Democracy. But the people are not ready yet to place a party in the lead whose most expressive motto is the cheerless word "forget." That motto may express contrition, but it does not inspire hope. Neither the confidence nor enthusiasm will ever be aroused by any party which enters each campaign uttering the language of the mourner.

Whole Party United.

There is one fundamental plank, however, on which the two great parties are in agreement. Both believe in the equality of men. The difference is that the Democratic party would make every man no higher than the lowest, while the Republican party would make every man as high as the best. But the Democratic course will provoke no outside interference now, for the Republican motto is that of the great commander, "Don't interrupt the enemy while he is making a mistake."

In politics as in other fields, the most impressive arguments spring from contrast. Never has there been a swifter or more complete example of unity than is now afforded by this assemblage. You are gathered here not as factions torn by disordant views, but moved by one desire and one purpose. You are the chosen representatives of the most enlightened party in the world. You meet not as strangers, for no men are strangers who hold the same beliefs and espouse the same cause. You may separate two bodies of water for a thousand years, but when once the barrier is removed they mingle instantly and are one. The same traditions inspire and the same purposes actuate all. Never was there a truer type than now. These purposes stand with deeper root than ever.

At least two generations have passed away since the origin of that great movement from which a spirit has been born which has been the leading impulse in American politics for half a century.

Always Sure in Crisis.

In that movement, which was both a creation and an example, were those great characters which endowed the Republican party at its birth with the attributes of justice, equality and progress, which have held it to this hour in line with the highest sentiments of mankind. From these men we have inherited the desire, and to their memory we owe the resolution, that those great schemes of government and humanity, inspired by their patriotism, established by their blood, shall remain as the fixed and permanent emblem of their labors, and the abiding signal of the liberty and progress of the race.

There are many new names in these days, but the Republican party needs no new title. It stands now where it stood at the beginning. Memory alone is needed to tell the source from which the inspirations of the country flow. A drowsy memory would be as guilty now as a sleeping watchman when the enemy is astir. The name of the Republican party stands over every door where a right-eous cause was born. Its members have gathered on every memorial day. If the party now weak, it inspired by high resolve. Its fame is more than 50 years has been the sign of hope on every spot where liberty was the watchword. Not even the prophecy of its name is needed to point out with what duty it is charged and what it must do. Its history and purposes I have described, striving to show the essence and aspirations of patriotism, find their best concrete example in the career and doctrines of the Republican party.

But not alone upon the principles of that party are its members in accord. With the same devotion which has marked their adherence to those principles, magnificent unanimity has chosen as its leader him already singled out the man to bear their standard and to lead the way. No higher badge was ever yet conferred. But, great as the honor is, the circumstances which surround it make that honor even more profound.

No Stranger Called.

You have come from every state and territory in this vast domain. The country and the people are known to you each and all. You bare their contributions to this splendid throng. Every highway in the land is lending its aid and crowded with the members of that great party which sees in this splendid unity the symbol of its rise and power. Within this unexampled multitude is every rank and condition of the race, and every creed and occupation. But today a common purpose and desire have engaged us all, and from every nook and corner of the country rises but a single choice to fill the most exalted office in the gift of a free people.

He is no stranger waiting in the shade to be called suddenly into public light. The American people have seen him for many years and always where the fight was thickest and the greatest need. In war he has been alike conspicuous in the pursuits of peace and in the arduous stress of war. No man now living will forget the spring of '98, when the country rang with the highest sentiments of manhood. From these men we have inherited the desire, and to their memory we owe the resolution, that those great schemes of government and humanity, inspired by their patriotism, established by their blood, shall remain as the fixed and permanent emblem of their labors, and the abiding signal of the liberty and progress of the race.

No man now living will forget the spring of '98, when the country rang with the highest sentiments of manhood. From these men we have inherited the eager citizens surging to the front as soldiers. The man whom this convention has already in its heart was among the first to hear the call and answer to his name. Preferring peace, but not afraid of war; faithful to every private obligation, yet first to volunteer at the hour of national peril; a leader in civil life and yet so quick to comprehend the arts of war that he grew almost in a day to meet the high exactions of command.

Tested by Danger.

There is nothing which so tests a man as great and unexpected danger. He may pass his life amid ordinary scenes, and what he is or does but few will ever know. But when the crash comes or the flames break out, a moment's time will single out the hero in the crowd. A flash of lightning in the night will reveal what years of daylight have not discovered to the eye. And so the flash of the Spanish war revealed that lofty courage and devotion which the American heart so loves and which you have met again to decorate and recognize. His qualities do not need to be retold, for no man in that exalted place since Lincoln has been better known in every household in the land.

He is not conservative, if conservatism means waiting till it is too late. He is not wise, if wisdom is to count a thing a hundred times when once will do. There is no regret so keen, in man or country, as that which follows an opportunity unembraced. Fortune soars with high and rapid wing, and whoever brings it down must shoot with accuracy and speed. Only the man with steady eye and nerve and the courage to pull the trigger brings the largest opportunities to the ground. He does not always listen while all the sages speak, but every day at nightfall beholds some record which if not complete has been at least pursued with conscience and intrepid resolution.

Hands Strong and Clean.

He is no slender flower swaying in the wind, but that heroic fibre which is best nurtured by the mountains and the snow. He spends little time in review, for that he knows can be done by the schools. A statesman grappling with the living problems of the hour he gropes but little in the past. He believes in going ahead. He believes that in shaping the destinies of this great republic, hope is a higher impulse than regret. He believes that preparation for future triumphs is a more important duty than an inventory of past mistakes.

A profound student of history, he is today the greatest history maker in the world. With the instincts of the scholar, he is yet forced from the scholar's pursuits by those superb qualities which fit him to the last degree for those great world currents now rushing past with larger volume and more portentous aspect than for many years before. The fate of nations is still decided by their wars. You may talk of orderly tribunals and learned referees; you may sing in your schools the gentle praises of the quiet life; you may strike from your books the last note of war, martial anthem, and yet out in the smoke and thunder will always be the tramp of horses and the silent, rigid, untamed face. Men may prophesy that their blood shall remain as the fixed and permanent emblem of their labors, and the abiding signal of the liberty and progress of the race.

There are many new names in these days, but the Republican party needs no new title. It stands now where it stood at the beginning. Minnesota Orator Speaks of Pre-Eminent Qualifications of Leader.

[By Associated Press to The Gazette.]

CHICAGO, June 23.—Joseph B. Cotton of Minnesota, in seconding the nomination of Roosevelt, said:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Convention:

Responsive to the swelling chorus of millions of voters from all over the republic we are here to name as our standard-bearer the gifted son of the Empire state, who has in his makeup all the resolute spirit and vigor of the pioneer, and in whose veins while he grows and prosperity will ever keep full pace with the giant tread of the nation itself, I desire to second the nomination of that intrepid leader, that potent statesman, that master workman, that great American, that tried, trusted and incomparable public servant, the president now, the president again to be—Theodore Roosevelt.

SOUTH SIDE CARNIVAL.

Cooper Will Use His Bicycle in a Raised Circle With Other Daring Riders.

The labor carnival on the South Side at the end of the Smithfield street bridge in Wabash park, will be the best entertainment of the sort seen here this summer. Cooper, a cyclist, has been secured by the Ferari Brothers, as the feature of the show. He gives an exhibition on a platform that can be raised and when he has shown how much he can do with a bicycle on the ground, he gives the signal and the platform is raised into a wooden bowl, around which, with four other riders, this daring man whirls.

While they are riding, the circle is lowered to the earth. This is only one of the many acts which will be seen at the carnival on the South Side. The carnival opens next Monday afternoon and many attractions will be exhibited, including one of the best wild animal acts now on the road.

MARYLAND PAYS HER HIGH TRIBUTE

ABILITY, COURAGE, HONESTY

[By Associated Press to The Gazette.]

CHICAGO, June 23.—Harry S. Cummings of Baltimore, seconding the nomination of President Roosevelt, said:

For the distinguished honor of seconding the nomination of that grand type of the American citizen, Theodore Roosevelt, I am profoundly grateful.

Fortunate, indeed, is it for this government that it has had during the eight years just passed a political organization such as ours to meet face to face with undaunted courage and determination the many perplexing questions which have arisen during that period.

Equally fortunate has been our party to have had within its ranks during this crucial period such men as our able, wise and patriotic McKinley of beloved memory, and our capable, courageous and aggressive Roosevelt, upon whose youthful though ample shoulders the mantle of the great McKinley fell.

"By their fruits ye shall know them." Theodore Roosevelt brings to his party and the nation at the close of his administration the precious fruits of three years' able and faithful service.

The solemn promise made by him when gloom and distress overshadowed the nation, when stout hearts grew faint, when fears and misgivings were abroad in the land, when the nation bowed in tears for her fallen hero, that promise made at a most trying time in our country's life, has been kept to the letter, and he brings as an evidence of such the plans and purposes of his martyred predecessor fully developed and completed.

He is above all things a true, honest, earnest, patriotic American citizen.

He is a leader of unflinching courage—a man of wisdom—a man of action.

He is open and frank, free from intrigue or concealment. In his life and walk and conduct he stands unapproached and unapproachable. He is a broad man, broad in intellect, broad in sympathies, broad in soul; he lends a listening ear to the cry of the down-trodden and oppressed, and with strong and ready arm encircling the weak and helpless, he bids them rise and hope and live.

He is a just man and believes that a man should be judged by his merit alone, and that the just rewards of faithful and patriotic service should be withheld from no one, for any cause whatever.

With a vision unclouded by bias or prejudice, he sees through the outer clay, clad in different hues, the man within, and there beholds the image of the Divine Master, indicating the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man.

He believes that corruption and dishonesty in private life and in public office should be unearthed, exposed and punished, no matter who the guilty party may be or how high in official life he may stand.

He believes that respect for and obedience to law are the foundation upon which this government must rest, and that the violation of the oath of office is little less than treason.

He believes that the Constitution of the United States and every amendment thereof should be rigidly enforced, and that its violation by whatever subterfuges or indebtedness of expression, should be condemned and remedied.

He is, for these good and sufficient reasons, the man whom the people of every section and in every walk of life want for this high office.

First of all, the powerful Christian and moral sentiment of the nation demands his nomination, and every Christian and moral agency will be exercised for his election.

The laboring masses demands him.

The farmer, as with happy heart he gathers in his bounteous harvest, stands ready to do battle for his return. The miner, who in contentment digs away in the bowels of the earth sees in him his salvation from oppression and encroachment.

The business man—the capitalist to whom this administration has brought abundant success—eagerly await his nomination. So surely as he is nominated by this convention today, so surely will he be elected by the people in November.

With his nomination and election what an inestimable power to operate for good before the party and the nation! With it will come new efforts to promote a greater prosperity, and a larger measure of happiness to all who dwell within our borders.

With it will come that calm and peaceful assurance, that while prosperous, happy and contented at home, a wise, safe and skillful diplomacy guards and protects our every interest throughout the civilized world.

And finally with it will come an advanced step toward the fulfillment of the great mission of the Republican party.

And that mission will not be performed until every section of our Constitution and every amendment thereof shall be respected and made effective—and until every man of every section, of every race and of every religion shal proclaim in one grand chorus of that Constitution, "Thou art my shield and buckler."

God grant that in our party's struggle to reach that time, it may ever have a man to place before the American people for their suffrage one who has the ability, courage, honesty and aggressivenes of Theodore Roosevelt.

KENTUCKY TURNS EYE OF HOPE TO ROOSEVELT

Ex-Governor Bradley Speaks for Men of South Who Desire Freedom.

[By Associated Press to The Gazette.]

CHICAGO, June 23.—Former Governor W. O. Bradley of Kentucky said in seconding the nomination of President Roosevelt:

The Republican party has made no mistakes; therefore it has no apologies to offer. It has known no period of shortcomings; it enters no plea of confession and avoidance. It offers no guaranty for the future save the record of its past.

It points to an enormously increased commerce, at home and abroad. To free homes given to free people. To a war waged to drive the tyrant from Cuba, and a promise faithfully kept to give to the army and navy whose deeds of valor have added imperishable glory to American arms. To the erection of churches and school house and the inauguration of civil government in the Philippines. To the universal prosperity now prevailing throughout the republic. To a generous expansion of business, provided for those who fought and the families of those who died, that the Union might be preserved. To the gigantic rebellion of all time courageously met and completely subdued. To the shackles of bondmen melted in the red flame of war and to stars preserved, and yet other fixed, in the firmament of freedom.

We cannot stand at the base of Bunker Hill monument, as pictured by Thomas and call the roll of our slaves; but we can stand on any spot of the earth and call the long roll of Republican statesmen and soldiers—the most distinguished and illustrious that the nation has produced, who rendered impossible the fulfillment of that prediction.

Men of the north, we come from the battlefield consecrated to freedom with the blood of your brave sons. We come to the Soldiers' and Sailors' cemeteries and place flowers on your patriot dead, and each year commemorate their deeds and decorate their graves with flowers. In their names and by their memories the disfranchised south appeals to you for justice, and bids us seek your sons marching up and fought and died in vain? Shall it be said that a nation can exist part slave and part free? Are people free who are forced to bear the burden and yet denied the highest privilege of citizenship? If it is true that we warrant not be found in the Constitution to prevent disfranchisement, then we beg that you no longer permit the disfranchised and oppressed to be estimated for the purpose of increasing the electoral strength of their oppressors.

Though the grape is crushed and the grain is ground they produce neither wine nor bread for the persecuted men of the south.

Surrounded by difficulties, struggling in vain to be free, they instinctively turn to the brave, true man, who has said that he would not close the door of hope on a struggling race.

The southern Republicans are devoted to him and will follow him with all the affection and enthusiasm with which the "Old Guard" followed Napoleon. They have unshaken faith in his superb courage, even-handed justice and unsullied honor.

We have not forgotten how, when the war clouds hung dark in the nation's horizon, he sacrificed office and left a happy home and a beloved wife and children to bare his bosom in the storm of battle. The same patriotism and courage that inspired him then has animated him throughout his administration.

He boldly and fearlessly advances; he never sounds the retreat. Imbued with never-failing courage, combined with sound and conservative judgment; brilliant as a meteor, yet steady and certain as the sun in its course; gifted with broad and intelligent statesmanship, fixed in lofty purpose, he is the embodiment of American ideas, American vigor and the most exalted type of American manhood.

He was born to fulfill a mission. That mission in part accomplished will be completed in coming years, and his name shall go ringing down the centuries with those of the immortal few "who were not born to die."

In Kentucky we have "contended against principalities and powers and the rulers of darkness." We have, in truth, fought with all manner of beasts, not at Ephesus—but at Frankfort. We are serving ourselves for the coming conflict, and in November next hope to break the chains which partisan legislation has thrown around us and restore freedom to the state which gave birth to Abraham Lincoln and holds within its bosom the ashes of Henry Clay.

DIFFERENT WITH THE DEMOCRATS

Senator Beveridge Says Republican Candidates Are Chosen by the People.

SECONDS NAME OF ROOSEVELT

[By Associated Press to The Gazette.]

CHICAGO, June 23.—Senator Beveridge, on behalf of the state of Indiana, seconded the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt. He spoke as follows:

Gentlemen of the Convention—One difference between the oppostion and ourselves is this: They select their candidate for the people, and the people select our candidate for us.

This was true four years ago when we accepted the people's judgment and named William McKinley, whose perfect mingling of mind and heart, of wisdom and of tenderness, won the trust and love of the nation then and makes almost holy his memory now. His power was in the people's favor, his shrine is in the people's hearts.

It is true today when we again accept the people's judgment and name Theodore Roosevelt, whose sympathies are as wide as the republic, whose courage, honesty and vision meet all emergencies, and the sum of whose qualities make him the type of twentieth century Americanism. And the twentieth century American is nothing more than the man of '76 facing a new day with the old faith.

Theodore Roosevelt, like William McKinley, is the nominee of the American fireside. So were Washington and Jefferson in the early time; so was Andrew Jackson when he said "The Union: It must be preserved," so was Abraham Lincoln when, the Republic saved, he bade us "bind up the nation's wounds;" and Grant when, from victory's very summit his lofty words, "let us have peace," voiced the spirit of the hour and the people's prayer.

Chosen by the People.

When nominated by parties, each of these great presidents was, at the periods named, already chosen by the public judgment. And so today, the Republican party, whose strength is in its obedience to the will of the American people, merely executes again the decree which comes to it from the American home in naming Theodore Roosevelt as our candidate.

The people's thought is his thought; American ideals, his ideals. This is his only chart of statesmanship—and no other is safe. For the truest guide an American president can have is the collective intelligence and massed morality of the American people. And this ancient rule of the fathers is the rule of our leaders now.

Theodore Roosevelt is a leader who leads; because he carries out the settled purposes of the people. Our president's plans, when enunciated, are merely the echo of the nation's will accomplished. And that is why the people will elect him.

They will elect him because they know that if he is president we will get to work and keep at work on the canal. After decades of delay, when the people want a thing done, they want it done.

They know that while he is president the flag will "stay put," and no American advantage in the Pacific or the world be surrendered. Americans never retreat.

Wrong-Doing Stamped Out.

While he is president no wrong-doer in the service of the government will go unwhipped of justice. Americans demand honesty and honor, vigilant and fearless.

While he is president, readjustment of tariff schedules will be made only in harmony with the principle of protection. Americans have memories.

While he is president peace with every nation will be preserved at any cost, excepting only the sacrifice of American rights; and the vigor with which he maintains these will be itself a guarantee of peace.

The American people will elect him because, in a word, they know that he does things the people want done; that he thinks of measures, discusses them—does things only after discussing them—but does things; and does only those things the people would have him do. This is characteristically American; for wherever he is, the American is he who achieves.

On every question all men know where he stands. Americans, frank themselves, demand frankness in their servants. Uncertainty is the curse of business. The people can always get along if they know where they are and whither they are going.

His past is his proof. Every great measure of his administration was so wise that, enthusiastically sustained by his own party, it won votes even from the opposition.

Do you name Cuban reciprocity? The opposition refused and then opposition votes helped to ratify it.

No Flaw for Opposition.

Do you name corporate legislation? The opposition resisted and then opposition votes helped to enact it.

Do you name the canal—that largest work of construction, the eternal wedding of the oceans, shrinking the circumference of the globe, making distant peoples neighbors, advancing forever civilization all around the world? This herculean undertaking in the interest of all the race, planned by American statesmanship, to be wrought by American hands, to stand through the ages protected by the American flag; this vast achievement which will endure when our day shall have become ancient, and which alone is enough to make the name of Theodore Roosevelt illustrious through all time—this fulfillment of the republic's dream accomplished by Republican effort, finally received votes even from an opposition that had tried to thwart it.

Of what measure of Theodore Roosevelt's administration does the opposition dare even to propose the repeal? And when has the record of any president won greater approval?

And so the people trust him as a statesman. Better than that, they love him as a man. He wins admiration in you. He wins not affection also. In the American home—that temple of happiness and virtue where dwell the wives and mothers of the republic, cherishing the beautiful in life and guarding the morality of the nation—in the American home the name of Theodore Roosevelt is not only honored but beloved.

His Greatest Triumph.

And that is a greater triumph than the victory of battlefields, greater credit than successful statesmanship, greater honor than the presidency itself would be without it. Life holds no reward more noble as the confidence and love of the American people.

The American people! The mightiest force for good the ages have evolved. They began as children of liberty. They believed in God and His providence. They took truth and justice and tolerance as their eternal ideals and marched fearlessly forward. Wildernesses stretched before them—they subdued them. Mountains rose—they crossed them. Deserts obstructed—they conquered them. Their faith failed them not and a continent was theirs. From ocean to ocean cities rose, fields blossomed, railroads ran; but everywhere church and school were permanent proof that the principles of their origin were the life of their maturity.

American methods changed, but American character remained the same. They outlived the age of homes and the Bible. They advanced but forgot not their fathers. They delved in earth, but remembered the higher things. They made highways of the oceans, but distance and climate altered not their Americanism. They began as children of liberty, and children of liberty they remain. They began as servants for the Father of Lights, and His servants they remain. And so into their hands in daily grow more of power and opportunity that they may work even larger righteousness in the world and scatter over ever widening fields the blessed seeds of human happiness.

Great Work Still Undone.

Wonderful beyond prophecy's forecast their progress; noble beyond the vision of desire their future. In 1801 Jefferson said, "The United States (then had room enough for our descendants to the thousandth and thousandth generation," three generations behold the oceans our boundaries. Washington never dreamed of railways. Today electricity and steam make Maine and California bound neighbors. This advance, which no seer could have foretold, we made because we are Americans—because a free people with unfettered minds and unresting joyfully pushed beyond the universe of human possibilities. These possibilities are not exhausted; we have hardly passed their boundaries. The American people also must exhaust the only tested and sure strength. God's work for us in the world is not finished. His future missions for the American people will be grander than any He has given us, nobler than we now can comprehend. And these tasks as they come we will accept and accomplish as our fathers accomplished theirs.

Ideals are Eternal.

And when our generation shall have passed and our children shall catch from our aging hands the standard we have borne, it will still be the old flag of Yorktown and Appomattox and Manila bay; the same to which they in their turn will then move onward will still be the strains that cheered the dying Warren on Bunker Hill and inspired the men who sang Lincoln's praises; the same ideals that will be in them triumphant as they are in us, will still be the old ideals that have made the American people great and honored among the nations of the earth.

This is the Republican idea of the American people; this the thought we have when we nominate today our candidate for the nation's chief; this the quality of American manhood a Republican standard-bearer must have. And this is just the Americanism of Theodore Roosevelt. Full of the old-time faith in the republic and its destiny; charged with the energy of the republic's full manhood; cherishing the ordinances of the republic's fathers and having in his heart the fear of God; inspired by the sure knowledge that the republic's splendid day is only in its dawn. Theodore Roosevelt will lead the American people in paths of safety to still greater welfare for themselves, still broader betterment of the race and to the added honor of the American name. Therefore Indiana seconds the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt.

FAILURE TO HIT THE BALL CAUSED THE CHAMPIONS' DEFEAT

TAYLOR AGAIN FOOLED PIRATES

The Ex-Chicagoan Still Has It on Clarke's Crew, Who Cannot Solve His Delivery.

KITTY BRANSFIELD REMOVED

From the way the Pirates started in yesterday afternoon, it looked very much as though they were going to drive an old hoodoo of theirs to the woods, but the hoodoo fooled them and was on deck doing business when the ninth inning was finished and the tally sheets showed a result of 3 to 4 in the Cardinals' favor.

The Pirates hoodoo is one Jack Taylor, who was wont to take all the conceit out of Fred Clarke's batters when he wore the uniform of the Chicago, and since his transfer to the world's fair city he does not seem to have lost any of his old time cunning. He was there with the pitching goods all right yesterday and a glance at the tabulated score will show that he can still pitch a few. The sum total of the Pirates' safeties for the afternoon were four and the team was mighty lucky to escape a shutout.

The clever work of Taylor in the pitching line was shown in the sixth inning, which Fred Clarke started with a pretty double to left field. The best batters in the Pirates' ranks follow Clarke and the 3,000 spectators settled back to look for runs, for it seemed that nothing could prevent at least one tally from crossing the plate. This was the point where Taylor settled down to business and showed himself to be a great pitcher. Wagner was given a base on balls purposely and Carisch made a noble attempt to sacrifice, but his grounder was fielded by Taylor, who got Clarke at third. Schring was an easy out from the pitcher to first base. Ritchey, the next batter, was passed to first and Taylor showed his good judgment, as he had no trouble to strike out Smith, thus ending what looked like a very dangerous rally.

That was the home team's only chance to score any runs and though a hard try was made in the closing inning yet Taylor proved too cunning for them. Leach had started the game by soaking the ball right on the trade mark and driving it to right field for three bases. Shannon made a grand attempt to head off the hit and got the ball in his hands, but he was on a hard run and could not hold to the sphere. Farrell's throw to first to catch Leach at the bag was one, the ball bounding high above Burke's head, and Leach scampered home before it could be fielded.

Sam Leever started in to do the pitching for the locals, but he only lasted two innings and was relieved at his own request. Leever's arm, lame in the back, complained of it before the game but thought he would take a chance, which turned out to be a fatal one. The Cardinals started to pound him from the start, and good fielding alone prevented runs in the opening inning. In the second, however, the visitors got going and two runs were scored. Wagner started the trouble with a fumbling Brain's grounder and singles by Barclay and McLean turned the trick.

Hoosier Miller was called to the relief and had what pitcher started the game the Pirates might have scored a victory. In this seven innings he was in the box the Cardinals secured but one run and scored only one run. That run was scored in the eighth when Barclay doubled to right, went to third on a wild pitch, and scored when Smith dropped the ball which Miller threw, was intended to head the runner off at the plate. The game was cleverly played, there being plenty of opportunities for the holders to secure either clubs, and quite a number of fine plays were made.

In the fifth inning Manager Clarke lifted Bransfield out of the game and sent Catcher Darling to that position. The cause of the shift was that Bransfield was showing poor judgment at the bat. In the third inning, with two men on the bases and but one out, Bransfield whaled away at the first ball pitched. The result was a pop foul fly, which the catcher gathered in. Bransfield in the end the Pirates' chance for runs went glimmering. The best work for the visitors was done by Barclay and Farrell, while Ritchey excelled for the Pirates. The score:

FAST, CLEVER GAME.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(Special.)—In a game characterized by the swiftest kind of playing the Washington Independent team opened the season here this afternoon with the All-Scholastics of Pittsburgh. Washington won 4 to 1. Both teams played great ball at nearly every stage and gave the two pitchers almost perfect support. Marks, of W. and J. college southpaw, gave the Pittsburghers but four hits, two of which were secured in the fifth inning, when the visitors' only run was made. Welsh was effective until the eighth, when Washington landed on his delivery for four hits, scoring three runs. The work of Moffett at second for the Scholastics, the fielding of Comfort and the batting of Collins for Washington were the features of the game. The score:

TROUBLE FOR RISHER.

Homestead Team May Be Bounced from Independent League.

Manager Howard Risher is having all kinds of trouble with the Homestead team. The team was booked to play three games with Warren, but they were called off at the last moment and now there is danger of Homestead being fired from the Independent league. The trouble arises over playing Upp and McCloskey, who are claimed by the Warren and Niles teams.

Risher received word yesterday that his games with Warren were cancelled and there was also an intimation that his team would be expelled from the league. Manager Risher states that the players in question come to his team of their own volition and both have signed contracts. He is not worrying any over the probable action of the Independent league, as his team is in demand and can get all the games it wants.

Manager Risher has arranged to play the Interscholastics at Steel Works park today. The Interscholastics were to play Sharon today, but the game was cancelled to take on the Chicago National league team. The game at Homestead will be called at 6 o'clock this evening. Mullin or Lynn will pitch for Homestead and Don Doyle or Schultz will twirl for the Interscholastics.

TRAVIS IS HOME.

The Golf Champion May Not Return to England Next Year.

NEW YORK, June 23.—(Special.)—Walter J. Travis, the American who now enjoys the title of international golf champion, has not mapped out a particularly active campaign for the remainder of the season. In an interview today Travis expressed doubts regarding a return to Great Britain next year to defend his title. He also has no intention of going west to compete in the coming open championship of the United States to be decided over the Glenview course.

GALES FERRY, CONN., June 23.—Brownell, stroke of the Harvard four-oar crew, was sent to a hospital at New London last night and today it was decided by the doctors that he had appendicitis. He therefore will not row again this season and his withdrawal from the crew is regarded at the Harvard quarters as throwing the four-oared contest open to some question.

Heretofore the Harvard oarsmen have felt certain that the crimson substitute boat would win easily, but now they realize that it will be a hard race against the Yale four.

WILD APPLAUSE FOR ROOSEVELT

HIGH SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT

While the band played "America," an audience that packed Carnegie Music hall jumped to its feet and wildly applauded the name of Theodore Roosevelt. Men and boys cheered until they were hoarse, while women and girls waved their handkerchiefs. The enthusiasm continued until the band was compelled to repeat the national hymn.

The graduates of the Pittsburgh High school were holding their commencement exercises. Frederick Lissfelt spoke on "The Basis of Our Prosperity," concluding with a tribute to the valor and patriotism of the Republican party and an eloquent indorsement of the fearlessness of President Roosevelt. Then the storm broke loose.

Another sensation was created by the address on "Politics and Public Safety," delivered by Graduate Bernard Harry Feldstein. Reviewing the country at large, he finally centered his attention on Pittsburgh, and said in part:

"There are too many striking instances in this city to even allow of comparisons elsewhere. We have all the departments necessary for public safety, but carelessness in their management has caused much suffering and death. The present state of the water supply is vile and there is no necessity for it. A filtration commission was appointed to investigate and made its report to councils two years ago. Yet we drink polluted water today and the death rate here is four times greater than in New York city. The people saw fit to elect the Citizens party, thinking they would get a good, clean government. They have been bitterly disappointed."

Other addresses were made by Flora L. Yagle, on "Chinese Education;" Henry R. Gilbert, "Henry M. Stanley;" Margaret L. Stevenson, "Ancient Japan;" Jane C. Martin, "An American Educational Hero;" Madaline V. Faeder, "The Woman Novelist;" Benjamin Lichter, "True Love of Nationalism," and Sadie M. Soffel, on "Masters of the Situation." The Rev. Dr. Daniel Dorchester, Jr., opened the exercises with prayer, and Edward Rynerson, director of the high schools, was master of ceremonies, while President D. L. Gillespie of the central board of education addressed both graduates and audience.

AMONG THE CLUBS

Teacher's Institute Next Week.

A special meeting of chairmen and sub-committees was held yesterday morning in the Twentieth Century club house to complete the arrangements for the opening of the summer playgrounds and vacation schools on Tuesday morning, July 5. Each day next week an institute for the teachers and the members of the committees will be conducted in the Chatham school, in Braun's auditorium building in South Highland avenue, East End, where they will be instructed in every branch of the play and work which will be presented to the children during the six weeks the playgrounds will be open. It will be a very busy week for all who will take part in this work, conducted by the clubwomen of Pittsburgh and Allegheny through the joint committee of women's clubs, with Miss Beulah Kennard general chairman.

At the meeting yesterday morning the treasurer, Mrs. Samuel A. Ammon, reported having received $2,000, just about one-half of the amount of special contributions which will be needed this season in addition to the appropriations which the Pittsburgh central board of education and Allegheny councils gave. A welcome addition will be the sum to be appropriated by the New Era club from the $1,000 made at the recent garden party.

It was definitely determined yesterday and announced that the chairman of the sub-committee in charge of each school shall be the highest in authority and shall act as principal of the playground and vacation school, the chairman when absent designating the head teacher or some member of her committee to act in her place.

Last year there was some little friction between the chairmen of the committees and the head teachers, which will be avoided this year by the ruling of yesterday.

Miss Eliza D. Armstrong, the chairman for flower day, announced that Friday of each week will be flower day at all the playgrounds and that flowers sent to the Market house to be distributed among the children should reach the Central Young Women's Christian association building in Fifth street by 9 o'clock on Friday mornings. Any who have flowers to contribute, but cannot take them themselves, may telephone Miss Armstrong the day before, and some member of the flower committee will call for the flowers.

The committees were announced yesterday, and are very representative of the women's clubs of the two cities. Mrs. John Cowley, who is chairman of the outings committee, appointed as chairman of a member of her committee to report to her the names of those children who will be sent to the several fresh air homes opened for them this season. Eighty-six children were taken down to the Fresh Air house in Glenfield last Tuesday, and that number may be sent every two weeks. Twenty-five children may be sent every two weeks to the Lucile Bouquet summer home of Kingsley house. Sixty children will be received every alternate two weeks at the home in Sewickley, the intervening two weeks being already allotted to those recommended by the managers and matron of the Woods Run Industrial home.

The chairmen of the committees in charge of the different playgrounds and schools, who will act as principals and also on the outings committee, are as follows, the committee being composed of members of the clubs represented by their chairmen:

Pittsburgh Fortieth Street school, Mrs. J. J. Cowell, Lawrenceville New Century club; O'Hara school, Mrs. William Macrum, Travelers club; Minersville, Mrs. James K. Duff and Mrs. William J. Aplin, Wimodausis club; Grant school, Mrs. Annie E. Smith, Woman's club of Pittsburgh; Forbes school, Mrs. Alfred Longmore and Mrs. Jesse Carey, Pittsburgh Sorosis; Soho school, Mrs. James Bennett, Colonial; Riverside, Mrs. Robert Lynch, New Era club; Larimer school, Mrs. C. M. Davis, Wilkinsburg Woman's Suffrage club; Columbian Council school, Miss Welhi of the Columbian Council of Jewish Women; South Side Recreation park, where industrial classes will be conducted, Mrs. Samuel S. Miller, Wimodausis; Allegheny playgrounds, Sherman Avenue school, Mrs. H. W. Golden, Women's Auxiliary of Allegheny Commandery No. 35, Knights Templar; Irwin Avenue school, Mrs. David Hastings, Mothers and Homemakers' League; Third Ward school, Miss Stuner, Fortnight club, Fourth ward, Mrs. E. A. Jones, Travelers club; Fifth ward, Mrs. John Cowley, Summer Work club; Eighth ward, Miss Sara Ninth ward, Mrs. S. L. Gilson, Women's Club of the Sewickley Valley; Twelfth ward, Mrs. G. W. L. Price, Woman's club of Pittsburgh.

Date for Outdoor Plays Changed.

It has become necessary to change the date for the outdoor theatrical entertainment on the grounds of the Pennsylvania College for Women from Friday evening, July 1, to Saturday afternoon, July 2. The entertainment will be given under the auspices of the Travelers club and the Lawrenceville New Century club for the benefit of the summer playgrounds and vacation schools. A long list of patronesses, to include well-known society and club women, is being prepared by Mrs. Samuel A. Ammon, and will also include Mrs. Ammon, Miss Beulah Kennard, Miss Jennie D. Bradley, Mrs. William Macrum and Mrs. J. J. Covert.

The setting for the plays will be very realistic, the stage being a portion of the college campus in the midst of a natural amphitheater. "A Happy Pair," presented by Miss Vera Miles Smith and John Mawhinney as Mr. and Mrs. Honeyton, will precede a more ambitious effort, "A Vermont Farm." The setting for the second play will be made most effective by the appearance of the cows, securely tied, it is to be hoped, and chickens. The cast will include Miss Vera Miles Smith, Miss Blanche Harlan, Miss Grace St. Clair, Miss Kate Pierce, Miss Frances Gray, Mrs. M. L. Pierce, Lou Vizard, Herbert E. Phillips, Bert Jones, John Mawhinney, Charles Wirth, George A. Harley and Walter Gordon. The plays will be given under the direction of G. Stuart Brodock.

Miss Lanahan Chosen President.

At a meeting of the Relief club at the home of Miss Stella Loughney yesterday morning, Miss Florence Lanahan was elected president to succeed Miss Pauline Donnelly. Miss Donnelly has gone abroad for a year. The members of the club have decided to open their summer home in Idlewood on the first Saturday in July. The four girls who will have charge for the first week will go down on the last day of June. They are Miss Gertrude McCaffrey, Miss Elizabeth Heyl, Miss Jane Patterson and Mrs. Eugene Reilly. Twenty children will be taken down to the summer home every two weeks. A new office, that of second vice president, was created yesterday, Miss McCaffrey being elected to fill it.

Another Benefit for Playgrounds.

The Wilkinsburg Woman's Suffrage club held a Shakespeare garden party last night on the grounds about the residence of Dr. E. P. Gray, Rebecca avenue and Hay street, Wilkinsburg, for the benefit of the juvenile court, the children's play grounds, the Soho public bath houses and other civic work. The members of the club present appeared as Shakespearean characters and the grounds were attractively decorated. Mrs. Kate Sherrard was chairman of the general committee of arrangement.

Outing of Working Mothers.

The Working Mothers' association gave an excursion on the steamer Francis J. Torrance yesterday to poor children of Pittsburgh, Homestead and Braddock. The pleasant day, the trip on the river and the enjoyable lunch served at noon made the day a red-letter day to the hundreds of children. Mrs. A. Dowie, Miss McKinney, Miss Riley and Miss Miller were in charge of the excursion and were ably assisted by the officers of the boat.

No Action Taken.

A short meeting of the public baths committee, a sub-department of the permanent civic committee of Women's clubs of Western Pennsylvania, was held yesterday morning, when reports were presented on available sites for the Soho public bath and wash house. Mrs. George W. Schluederberg was chairman of the committee on sites and reported, but no action was taken.

NEW CAR ROUTE.

Trolleys Will Reach the South Side by Way of Tenth Street Bridge.

For the first time in the history of the trolley, open or summer cars will be run tomorrow on Carson street. General Superintendent John Murphy of the Pittsburgh Railways Company yesterday announced that beginning tomorrow morning the open cars will begin running. Instead of coming across the Smithfield street bridge they will be run over the Tenth street bridge, which is now open to vehicle travel.

The new route, which will be known as the Carson street short line, will start at the Birmingham barn, Thirtieth and Carson streets. The cars will run down Carson to Tenth street, over the bridge to Second avenue, to Grant street, to Third avenue, to Market street, and back the same way via Fourth avenue. The run from Fourth avenue and Market to Thirtieth street will be made in 20 minutes.

IS NOW WELL KNOWN EXPERT

THE PITTSBURGH GAZETTE BUREAU, Young's Ocean Pier, ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 23.

United States Fish Commissioner Bower, together with J. Frank Ellis, superintendent of the bureau of fisheries, and John W. Titcomb, special agent of the department of agriculture, are in Atlantic City making arrangements for the annual meeting of the Fisheries society, which will be held in Young's pier on July 25, 28 and 29. Supt. Titcomb, who before his appointment in the government service was a resident of the Twenty-second ward, Pittsburgh, and whose wife is visiting relatives there, has just returned from a trip to South America, where he has been stocking the waters of the Argentine Republic with American fish. He says he met with unexpected success, in spite of the prediction that he would be unable to accomplish the feat. In order to get the fish it was necessary to collect the eggs in the United States. He took white fish eggs from the great lakes, trout and salmon from Maine, and several other species. The eggs had to be shipped first to Europe by steamer, thence to South America and then transported by wagon about 300 miles across what is almost a desert. In order to prevent the eggs from hatching on the trip, they had to be packed in ice chests, where they were kept at a temperature of about 35 degrees. Supt. Titcomb kept a table of the amount of ice used, and when the eggs reached their destination he found that it had necessitated the use of a little more than two tons of ice.

He went to South America before the eggs were sent to him and established a hatchery, built after the plans of those used in the United States. He built the plant by the order of the Argentine government and located it on Mount Patagonia. As soon as that was completed, he sent for the eggs, and one of the men in the employ of the United States fisheries commission was sent over with them. The work of hatching was closely watched by a French expert, who was in that section of the country at the time, and he said that it would be an utter impossibility to stock the water with any kind of foreign fish, especially those from the United States, because, he declared, that the eggs could not be transported that distance before they would hatch. But Mr. Titcomb said the Frenchman had overlooked the fact that there were lines of steamers which had their own ice plants on board, and therefore he found out his mistake when the eggs arrived in perfect condition. Mr. Titcomb said he never had better results than he made from any experiments he made than with the eggs shipped to him at Argentine, and believes that the fish sent there will thrive and fill the waters of that part of the world.

JAPANESE POACHERS FOUND ON ISLAND

Shipwrecked and Short of Provisions—Rescued by United States Revenue Cutter.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS CABLE TO THE GAZETTE.]

HONOLULU, June 23.—The United States revenue cutter Thetis has returned here from a trip to the island of Lisiansky, about 1,300 miles to the northwest of Hawaii, where she went in search of Japanese poachers. The Thetis found that the Japanese schooner Yeiju, with 67 men on board, had arrived at the island on January 8 last, but that 10 days later she had been wrecked and 54 of the men on board drowned. The 57 survivors of necessity remained on the island. They were short of provisions, and when the Thetis found them they had only six pounds of rice left. The Thetis brought all the survivors to this place, when they will be taken back to Japan.

Three hundred and thirty-five packages of valuable plumage, gathered by the Japanese from the birds of the island for shipment to Paris, were abandoned on the island.

Once in a while some one who has traveled to the very edge of the danger line of stomach disease stops just in time to save his health. But the majority of people go across the line, and slight symptoms of indigestion grow to disease of the stomach, involving the other organs of digestion and nutrition.

Indigestion and other forms of stomach "trouble" are perfectly and permanently cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It strengthens the whole body by enabling the perfect digestion and assimilation of food.

$3,000 FORFEIT will be paid by the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Proprietors, Buffalo, N. Y., if they cannot show the original signature of the individual volunteering the testimonial below, and also of the writers of every testimonial among the thousands which they are constantly publishing, thus proving their genuineness.

"I have been suffering for about eight years," writes Mrs. H. Pierce, of Millsprings, Ky. "Have had several doctors to treat me—some for female weakness and others for stomach trouble, but received no relief. When I wrote you for advice I was hardly able to work, and you advised me what to do. I took nine bottles, five of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' four of 'Favorite Prescription,' also two vials of the 'Pellets.' Dr. Pierce's medicines will do all that you claim for them. Believe I would have been in my grave if I had not taken them."

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the book in paper covers, or 31 stamps for the cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

STOCK VALUES HOLD FIRM IN NEW YORK MARKET

By JOHN O. BAGLIN, Financial Editor.

The New York stock market is what the professionals call a "creeping market." The advance does not make much progress, and no one stock remains long a favorite, but the general average of prices shows a slight net gain each day. Yesterday London prices were fractionally higher, and as usual of late, the bulk of the business in New York was transacted during the first hour. Foreigners were buyers of U. S. Steel preferred, and the stock advanced to 56½, while the sinking fund 5s advanced to 75¾. The continued strength of these securities is regarded as of much significance in Wall street. The gossip yesterday was to the effect that Pittsburgh was again buying the preferred stock, and that semi-official assurances had been given that the turn in the condition of the iron and steel trade had come, or at least that it was in sight. There is nothing in the trade reviews to indicate such change. There has been, however, a moderate increase in the volume of orders recently placed for the heavier descriptions of iron and steel, and there is unquestionably a confident feeling as to the outlook for business early next year, but as for actual conditions in the trade today, they remain practically unchanged. Of course, the officials of the corporation would know long before the general public learned of the fact that there had been a change for the better, and the stock market would be the first to give intimation of the change. Hence the reason that Wall street looks upon the firmness of Steel preferred and the bonds as a significant straw. It would be unfair in this connection to withhold the statement that the general sentiment in Pittsburgh is rather bearish on the iron market. Pittsburghers are close to the situation. Take the steadily decreasing bank exchanges, which reflect the contraction in general business, which is dependent upon the iron trade, and they see the curtailment in the output of coal and coke, all of which suggest diminished earnings for the corporations. Naturally there is no doubt as to the ability of the company to earn its full quarterly dividend, and there is a growing feeling that it would be extremely bad business to trench further upon surplus in order to make up any deficiency in earnings to meet full dividend requirements. It might be said that Pittsburgh does not feel as confident as Wall street appears to be that the full dividend will be declared on Steel preferred on the 26th of next month.

Peoples Gas developed considerable strength during the day and advanced to 58¾, closing near the top. Consolidated Gas was less active, and after advancing to 108, sold off to 106½ at the close. Amalgamated Copper rallied a fraction to 50¾, but lost all the gain and closed near the lowest. The fractions were also less active, but closed nearly to them.

In the standard railroad list there was the same narrow range of fluctuations, but the tone of the market was firm, particularly for Pennsylvania and the grangers. The winter wheat harvest is progressing satisfactorily, and earnings reported for the second week in June are making a better showing. Shortly after 1 o'clock, when traders had apparently given up the hope of a sharp rally on the final action of the Chicago convention, there was a reaction in the general list and prices sold off to near the lowest of the day. Subsequently there was a recovery of the loss, and the market finally closed steady to firm. The volume of business was slightly larger than on any previous day of the week.

At one time during the day call loans were reported as low as 1½ per cent, and money was offered at the close at 1 per cent. Time loans continue extremely easy. There were no apparent changes in the foreign bank statement. The minimum rate of discount of the Bank of England remained unchanged, and there was practically no change in the bank's percentage of reserve to liability. Total reserve increased $3,905,000 and loans increased $3,265,000. The weekly report of the Bank of France showed a decrease in gold on hand of $1,100,000 and a decrease in bills discounted of $2,080,000. Commodity markets were all lower, and cotton, which was closed at or near the lowest prices of the day.

Crucible Steel preferred led the advance on the Pittsburgh stock exchange yesterday, selling up to 35 and reacting to 34¼ on sales of less than 100 shares. Offerings of the stock are light and the demand small, and the execution of comparatively small orders on either side of the market easily affects prices. U. S. Steel preferred rallied to 56¼. Pittsburgh Coal preferred was a fraction lower at 57⅝ and the common unchanged at 14¾. Westinghouse Air Brake advanced to 120, while Electric Storage Battery was unchanged at 78½. There was a good demand for bonds, but no sales occurred during the session.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

American Sewer Pipe yesterday declared a quarterly dividend of ¾ of 1 per cent, or at the rate of 3 per cent per annum. This is the first dividend on the stock, and the market for the latter, after sales at 21½, advanced to 21¾ bid at the close. The 6 per cent bonds were also higher at 94 bid.

Crucible Steel preferred is evidently in the hands of investors who propose to "stay with it" to the end. Occasionally some tired holder lets an odd price edge, because of the narrowness of the market, but when a buyer appears the stock can be obtained only by bidding up the price. Earlier in the week there were offerings at 33. Yesterday a small buying order sent the price to 34, but the price advanced to 35, closing at 34½ bid. The common stock was unchanged at 4¼ bid.

There were no transactions on the Pittsburgh stock exchange yesterday in bonds. But a member of one investment house reported that they had handled $150,000 bonds during the day. A member of another house said that they had handled $50,000, and that a small fraction stood between buyer and seller in another transaction of considerable size. On the exchange Philadelphia Company old 5s advanced to 100, and Pittsburgh Brewing 6s were wanted at 113 bid, but the underlying traction issues are in good demand.

Manufacturers Light & Heat was firmer, a small lot selling at 30¾ and 30⅝ being bid for quotable lots at the close. There was no stock offering for sale.

There was nothing doing in River Coal preferred, which was nominally quoted at 21 bid, 22 asked.

The directors of the Diamond National bank elected A. M. Stewart of James Stewart & Co., the contractors, a director, vice Charles Parkin, deceased. Homer J. Lindsay, of the Carnegie Steel Company, succeeded Mr. Parkin on the board of the Diamond Savings bank.

Fayette County Gas quoted at 75 bid, 77 asked. Union Natural Gas sold at 82 and more was wanted at 81.

At noon today there will be offered for sale on the Pittsburgh stock exchange 350 shares of Prudential Trust certificate of which it may concern. On January 22, a similar lot sold at auction at $140 per share.

Directors of the Home Trust Company organized by the re-election of the former officials. The deposits of the institution have passed the $1,200,000 mark.

A block of 1,000 Tonopah Extension was offered at $1.02 a share.

The Keystone bank of Pittsburgh has declared a regular quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent, and an extra dividend of ½ per cent, payable July 1 to stock of record June 22.

The Dollar Savings Fund & Trust Company of Allegheny declared the usual quarterly dividend of 4 per cent.

The Union National Gas Corporation has declared the usual quarterly dividend of 2 per cent. Action on the Pittsburgh Oil & Gas dividend will be taken in a few days.

The American Sewer Pipe dividend is payable July 1 to stock of record June 28.

The directors of the American Woolen Company have declared the regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent on the preferred stock, payable July 15. This makes $36.75 a share disbursed to preferred stockholders since the company's organization in 1899, amounting in the aggregate to $7,350,000.

Chicago Telephone directors have declared the regular quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent, payable June 30.

Directors of the Distilling Company of America have declared the usual quarterly dividend of 1 per cent on the preferred stock. All are payable July 15.

There are eight national banks in the country which have deposits of $50,000,000. Of these six are in New York, one in Chicago and one in Boston. There are more than 130 national banks in the United States that are able to report deposits of $5,000,000 or more. More than 50 of these banks are located in New York. In point of deposits the National City bank leads with $184,000,000. The National Bank of Commerce follows with $160,000,000. The First National bank has $110,000,000 of deposits and the National Park bank has $90,500,000. Then comes the First National bank of Chicago with $80,000,000 of deposits. The Hanover National bank of this city has $74,000,000 of deposits and the Chase National has $56,000,000. Then comes the National Shawmut bank of Boston with deposits of $54,000,000. In the list of these figures it is interesting to remember that it was only a comparatively few years ago that a bank with deposits of $30,000,000 was considered a wonderful institution.

The net earnings of Wabash for May increased $23,000. Jersey Central's net for the same month increased $130,800.

The annual report of United States Cast Iron Pipe shows gross profits, $1,293,810, a decrease of $36,800; net earnings, $1,107,170, a decrease of $88,981; written off for improvements, $125,000, an increase of $20,000. The present surplus is $732,170.

The steel plate pool will hold its meeting on Thursday, July 7. A steel plate manufacturer who was in the city Tuesday said that several members of the association had been approached by consumers who desired a reduction in prices. He declared that the sentiment of the various members of the pool was to hold prices at their present level, and owing to changed conditions there would have to be a radical readjustment of the price and wage schedules for the year 1905. He added that under present conditions a cut of 50 per cent in prices would not serve to stimulate the demand.

Very favorable weather for crops exists throughout the country with the greatest acreage of corn and cotton ever planted. This fact, and the close current quarter, is creating a feeling of stability among business men.

The head of one of the bituminous coal carrying roads says: "The coal trade is entirely free from cut-throat competition between producers. There was a boom during which a great many people arrived at the conclusion that any amount of money could be made in coal mining. Mines were opened everywhere until a productive capacity was reached which would have been in excess of the demands of business under conditions which prevailed a couple of years ago. But business fell off. As it is in pig iron so it is in soft coal. Both must wait for the revival of business which may come when large crops are being marketed. Meanwhile the enthusiasts are receiving a wholesome lesson. They are having a chance to see that if soft coal mining pays handsomely at times it yields only moderate returns over a period of years and that cut-throat competition never pays."

The tendency of new corporations to file papers in the state of Maine is claimed to be due to the lower taxation and fees in that state. In other words new organizations, under the existing dull conditions, are inclined to economize. A number of concerns that filed papers under the laws of the state of New Jersey, among them the Morris packing concern of Chicago, have withdrawn from that state and have reincorporated under the laws of the state of Maine. For a $1,000,000 corporation the secretary of state's fee in New Jersey is $200 and the annual tax $1,000. In Maine the state treasurer's fee is $100, and the annual tax $50.

The newly relisted American Steel Foundries stocks were dealt in at quotations considerably below the last prices for them before they were stricken from the stock exchange list.

The directors of the Dominion Coal Company held a protracted meeting Wednesday at the company's offices at Glace Bay. After a full discussion, it was decided to defer payment of the dividend on the common stock until the close of the year. The reasons given were the heavy floating debt and the disappointing statement for the first six months of the year, June being estimated. May and June while slightly better than the first four months were still not up to expectations. The directors declared the usual semi-annual dividend of 4 per cent on the preferred, payable July 2 to stock of record June 28.

It is evident that convictions on the ultimate outlook are by no means firmly held by speculators in stocks on the part of those at least who have suffered. Many also express their convictions in operations in stocks. Sentiment is decidedly mixed between those who see current unfavorable news sufficiently discounted in the present declines in the market and who expect the developments to be toward improvement, and those who fear a continuance of shrinkage in trade industry. Instead of inducing opposing speculative operations this variety of opinion seems to paralyze activity and accentuate the conservatism and even timidity which prevails. This spirit seems to be a fair reflection of that existing in the business world at large and its influence in these days of the market is scarcely limited some restrictive effect on the dealings.

The directors of the First National bank, Pittsburgh, have declared the regular dividend of 4 per cent on the capital stock, out of the earnings of current quarter, and an extra dividend of 2 per cent, out of the earnings of the current half year.

The Dry Goods Market.

NEW YORK, June 23.—The drygoods market has not developed according to the expectations of sellers and they are disappointed in the reception with which the revised prices have met at the hands of buyers. The latter, however, seem to have no confidence in the situation and are anticipating further revisions which, however, sellers claim are impossible.

STOVE PLANT IS TO COST $75,000

NEW SCHOOL HOUSES ASSURED

The Pittsburgh Stove and Range Company has decided to again secure bids on its proposed plant in Preble avenue, Allegheny, and the architect, Emil Swenson, will put the plans on the boards this week. Last year bids were taken on the job both for a four and a six-story building, but they were too high. Recently the plans have been revised, and if the estimates are favorable, a six-story building will be erected this summer. The building will be of brick and steel and will adjoin the Anschutz-Bradberry plant of the company. Its estimated cost is $75,000. A few weeks ago the old DeHaven plant of the company was sold to P. Duff & Sons as a site for a molasses refinery to cost $100,000, and last spring the Vulcan-Graham plant was sold to the Joseph Home Land Company. When the new plant is completed the works of the company will be concentrated in Preble avenue.

Two New School Houses.

The contracts have been awarded to McDonald & Hartman of Beaver Falls for two school houses in Harmony township to cost $20,000 and $22,000, respectively. One will be an eight-room brick building on a plot 240 feet square and will face in Park road, running through to Maple avenue, Ambridge. The other, a similar building, will stand on 200x240 feet in Sixteenth street, Economy. Work will be started at once. Three churches are also preparing to build in Economy, the sites having been donated by the Liberty Land Company.

Architect John T. Comes has awarded the contract to W. A. Haskell of Charleroi for the erection of the St. Jerome Roman Catholic church in that place. The church will cost approximately $17,000. The same architect is taking bids on a rectory for the Rev. C. J. Freyvogel, Charleroi, Carruthers avenue, McKees Rocks, to cost $13,000.

Bids are being received by Architect Sidney F. Hackett for the chapel of St. Francis hospital in Fourth street. In connection with this work extensive improvements will also be made to the old buildings of the hospital.

Three East End Houses Traded.

Through the Land Title and Trust Company William Kennelly has sold to a local business man his three new houses on the east side of Sheridan avenue, near Stanton avenue, Nineteenth ward, for $25,500, or $8,500 each. The houses are nine-room reception hall brick dwellings on lots 25x120 feet each. They have been rented for a short time at $40 each, and about $45 a month each. In part payment for the houses there was tendered a plot of vacant frontage at the head of Hazelwood avenue, Twenty-third ward, valued at $4,500.

R. S. Morgan has sold to a local merchant his residence in Braddock avenue, Twenty-second ward, for $20,000. The house is a modern 14-room center hall residence on 45x150 feet and was bought for a home.

Where Improvements Damage Property.

A striking example of the difficulties often experienced in arriving at a fair estimate of damages and benefits to property owners caused by contemplated improvements came to light yesterday when a Fourth avenue property owner was asked to estimate the damages on a tract of 14 acres of land in the Twenty-second ward which will be cut by a new city sewer. The land is located on the Wilkinsburg line and is valued at about $1,000 an acre. A large sewer from Wilkinsburg already runs across the property, and this, with a smaller one, furnishes abundant drainage for the property. The proposed city sewer will be 10 feet deep, which is about 1,000 feet long diagonally, and be about 10 feet below the surface. As the owner can demand payment for a strip only five feet wide running along the sewer, the damages thus received would be less than $150, or too small to be considered. The chief damage likely to result from the improvement lies in the fact that many of the grades are changed, and the sewer would run directly across many fine building lots. Aside from being an inconvenience in digging foundations, it would be a great barrier to the sales of property, as no one wants a 34-inch sewer under his house where it is liable at any time to be dug up and repaired. This is only one of the many late instances where property owners are accused of handicapping contemplated changes, although their holdings are greatly depleted in value by the improvement.

Semi-Annual Dividend Declared.

The Lawyers' Realty Company, which was organized about a year ago, with a capital of $25,000, voted yesterday to declare a dividend of 3 per cent for the last six months. The dividend will be paid July 1. The company was formed through the efforts of several well-known attorneys to buy improved properties that were on the market at a bargain and would pay a high rent. A number of such properties have been purchased, some of them netting 14 per cent. The company starts on its second year with the following officers: President, Charles Houston; vice president, Attorney Thomas Marshall; secretary and treasurer, Attorney Charles K. Robinson.

The Real Estate Trust Company yesterday moved into the new office in its Wood street annex. Six fine rooms have been fitted up for offices for the salesmen, which will greatly relieve the congestion in the main office. The improvement will be greatly appreciated by the company's patrons, too, because it affords a wide entrance from Wood street to all the offices of the company.

C. E. Norris, with the Wilkinsburg Real Estate and Trust Company, sold for A. Fred Stoner lot 40x122, Elliott and Pitt streets, to Mrs. Mary Ann Siemans, which will present Hayes, lot in Elliott street, near Wood street, 42x122, to C. W. Hutchison, for $3,000, and for H. C. Smith Real Estate Company, 528 Oakwood street, lot 35x126, improved with modern dwelling, to William Graham, for $4,500.

Site for School House Bought.

Allegheny—A. D. Wilson sold for the U. S. Fleming estate to the Allegheny school board of education in Allegheny six lots, 25x125 feet each, in Eckert street for $5,000. The ground will be used as a site for an addition to the Eleventh ward school building, which faces in Shady avenue.

Belmar Place—The Pittsburgh Trust Company sold to George H. Shickler 50x93 feet at the southeast corner of Hermitage and Collier streets, Twenty-first ward, for $2,500.

Southern avenue—Annie Minsinger sold to J. Fortunati an improved lot, 25x90 feet, in Southern avenue, Thirty-second ward, for $2,400. She also sold to Michael Fortunato a similar lot in the same street for $2,600.

Gist street—Alice G. Skiller sold to Joseph Gatti an improved lot, 25.5x65 feet, in Gist street, Fourteenth ward, for $2,200.

Tioga street—Mary Ann Arnold sold to Antoi Martione an improved lot, 24x100 feet, in the north side of Tioga street, Twenty-first ward, for $1,800.

Building permits were issued yesterday to J. P. Schaffer for 50 brick dwellings in Hamilton avenue, near Sterrett street, to cost $75,000, 33 two-story dwellings on a nearby plot to cost $74,250, and two three-story business houses at Sterrett street and Collins avenue to cost $7,000, and to E. H. Reismyer for two three-story store and dwelling houses in Hamilton avenue to cost $7,000, 18 two-story brick dwellings nearby, $40,500, and 26 smaller dwellings, 39,000; P. H. Butler was granted permission to build an addition to a store room in Penn avenue and Grant street, to cost $13,000.

J. W. Sherrer sold for Phillip Klemens to Campolo Paolo, lot 25x100, in Worthington street, Twenty-first ward, for $225.

BERRY MARKET BOOMS; FLORIDA PEACHES IN

Raspberries are now on the market here in good sized quantities. Both the black and red sticks are commanding full prices. Reports from growers are that the crop this year, especially that in the south, is the biggest and best in the past 25 years. Gooseberries have arrived and are in demand with other berries. Huckleberries and blackberries and dewberries are arriving in ample supply and reports from New Jersey are that for the first time in 20 years the huckleberry crop in the northern part of that state will reach proportions of the days when a bushel of berries could be picked from every bush. Until recent years huckleberries have sold higher than strawberries and other stock of that kind, but unless indications fail, huckleberries will be at a discount in all markets this year. Strawberries are still moving freely and demand keeps up fairly well.

Florida peaches arrived yesterday in limited quantities and commanded bigger prices than the stock did this time last year. Beans were somewhat easier yesterday and so were cucumbers, with reduction in quotations. Kalamazoo celery has arrived and asparagus is coming in plentifully. Berries are coming forward rapidly. Potatoes brought about the same prices yesterday as on Wednesday with a weak market.

No changes were noted in the grocery line, business is reported fair. Eggs are very firm and butter is about holding its own. Hay has not improved much, but it is thought the market will improve as the time approaches for new stock to come in. There is a firmer feeling on oats, but no changes have been made on quotations locally. Rye is done for this season.

HAY, GRAIN AND FEED.

Receipts bulletined—Pennsylvania, 21 cars hay, 13 cars oats, 6 cars feed, 6 cars corn, 1 car hay and straw; Pittsburgh & Lake Erie, 3 cars hay, 2 cars oats, 1 car feed; Baltimore & Ohio, 10 cars hay, 3 cars oats.

Dealers charge an advance of 5c a bushel on grain and $3 00 a ton on hay and millfeed from warehouses in less than carload lots.

Searching for Gushers in the Outside Territory

Operators in the lower southwest fields are not bringing in any gushers, but the fault is not theirs, for they are making an effort and going outside of the Folsom district. In Harrison county, the Wallace Oil and Gas Company has drilled its second test on the Ila Talkington farm through the Gordon and the hole is filled up 2,000 feet with fluid. It will be a producer. In the same district, the South Penn Oil Company has drilled its No. 6 on the F. A. Parish farm 1,350 feet below the Gordon and has found no oil. The Acme Looman company's test on the Agnes Looman farm is drilling at 50 feet in the stray and has no show of oil or gas.

In the Salem district, Harrison county, the South Penn Oil Company has drilled its test on the Davisson-Smith farm through the Gordon and the hole has filled up 2,000 feet with fluid. It will be given a shot and may improve its production. In the Kinchlo creek district, Lewis county, the Crude Oil Company has given its test on the L. E. Gall farm a shot in the fifth sand and will have a 25 or 30-barrel producer. This location is one mile in advance and to the west of the same company's test on the Henri Romine farm, which has been steadily increasing its production for some time and is now averaging 51 barrels a day.

In the Hebron district, Tyler county, the Carter Oil Company has completed its test on the J. W. Sheppard farm and has a show for a 10-barrel pumper in the fifth sand. In Marlan creek, Murphy district, Ritchie county, the Southern Oil Company has completed its No. 6 on the W. R. Kimble farm and has a 5-barrel pumper in the salt sand. In the St. Mary's district, Pleasants county, Ellsworth & Davis have completed their test on the E. Griffith farm and have a duster in the Cow Run sand.

In the Littleton district, Wetzel county, the South Penn company's No. 2 on the E. Whitlatch farm is holding up at 225 barrels a day. No. 1 on the same farm is now producing 125 barrels a day. In the Wick district, Tyler county, the Melrose Oil and Gas Company's No. 4 on the T. H. Powell farm is producing 350 barrels a day. The Carter Oil Company's No. 7 on the J. W. Musgrave farm and No. 4 on the J. W. Ankrom farm are producing 225 and 175 barrels, respectively. Bartlett, Riddle & Brown's No. 1 on the Delania Ankrom farm is holding up at 100 barrels a day. Duff Brothers & Bower's No 8 on the Charles Ankrom farm is producing 125 barrels a day.

In the Ritchie creek district, Ritchie county, the Carter Oil Company's No. 1 on the Douglass reserve and the DeLong Farm Oil Company's No. 1 on the Sarah A. DeLong farm are producing 125 and 100 barrels a day, respectively. In the Milton district, Cabell county, the aggregate production of the eight producing wells in that district is now 310 barrels a day. In the Yellow creek district, in Calhoun county, the South Penn company has given its No. 3 on the Camden-Semmers farm a shot and it produced 172 barrels the ensuing 24 hours. In the same district the Cresco Oil and Gas Company's No. 1 on the S. I. Silman farm is holding up at 150 barrels a day.

On the Ohio side in the Plum run district, in Harrison county, the Wizard Oil Company has completed its No. 7 on the Jacob Warner farm and is drilling in the Big Injun sand. In the same district the Barricklow Oil Company has completed its No. 5 on the Barricklow heirs' farm and has the same kind of a pumper. In the Adams pool, in the same county, Steele & Lowry have started a test on the E. L. Cavin farm and have a duster. In the Trail run district, near Antioch, Monroe county, the Ann Oil Company has completed its second test on the Matilda Sinclair farm and has a duster in the Big Injun. In the Wolf Creek district, Washington county, the Pure Oil Producing Company has completed No. 20 on the Frank Ford farm and has a duster. At Imperial, Allegheny county, A. L. Oles' No. 2 on the Annie E. McMichael farm is good for 25 barrels a day.

President J. W. Patterson of the Wabash Pittsburgh Terminal Railway Company awarded yesterday the steel contract for the South Side elevated line the company will build. The work will be done by the American Bridge Company. The contract covers about 2,500 tons of structural steel and the work of erection. The value of the contract is about $200,000. The contract stipulates that the steel must be in place in four months from date, or about November 1.

The contract for the foundations has not yet been given, but will be in a few days, probably next Monday. These foundations will be of concrete, similar to those on which rests the steel superstructure of the work between the Monongahela bridge and the passenger terminal. There is probably two months of work on the foundations alone, as only the highest class of concrete work is accentable to the Wabash engineering department.

The letting of this contract gives a good piece of business to the American Bridge Company at a time when all new business is eagerly sought. This company has had many hundred thousand dollars worth of Wabash work since the plans were first advanced three years ago. The great cantilever bridges across the Monongahela and Ohio rivers, the spans lying between those bridges and in Ohio and the steel frame of the new Wabash passenger station, Liberty avenue and Ferry street are all the work of the American Bridge Company. The Pennsylvania Steel Company had the contract for the steel work between the station and the bridge.

Work is advancing rapidly on the plans for the Saw Mill run branch, by which the new Wabash line will be made a connection with the Carnegie plants through the Union railroad. This point of connection will be just south of Homestead at the yards of the Union Railroad Company, the Carnegie terminal road. New bids will be asked upon this work and the contract will be awarded in time for the completion of the branch before next winter. This road is the one that, under the famous Wabash-Carnegie contract is to turn over to the Wabash a large percentage of the Carnegie output.

The line on the South Side is the one which will tap the large freight houses which the Wabash will build there for its city business. It will also tap a number of the other industries in that section and the warehouses which are being built there by the Henderson-Johnston interests.

Summer Service Begins Today.

Beginning today the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie in conjunction with the Vanderbilt lines will inaugurate its summer car service between here and Lake Placid and Clayton. The car for the latter place will leave here at 11:30 p. m. today and every Tuesday and Friday hereafter. The Placid car will leave at 9:30 a. m. and will be run on the same days. Returning the cars will be run on Tuesdays and Fridays from Clayton, and on Mondays and Fridays from Lake Placid.

L. A. Robison, general agent of the Lake Erie, is in receipt of a personal letter from the head of the passenger department of the New York Central, who says that next season Pittsburgh will be given a number of new car routes, special service, etc., to Canadian and Adirondack points. A car will likely be run to Saratoga several times a week, as well as to Rideau.

In speaking of world's fair business Mr. Robison said: "I do not expect travel to reach Chicago that is said that the Wabash will use the Cleveland, Lorain & Wheeling. From the east the Erie trains will come into Cleveland over the Mahoning Valley branch and go out over the C., L. & W. That is faster from which point a line could be built to connect with the Erie's main line near Ashland. In the event that the Erie has arranged for such an entrance, the Baltimore & Ohio will use the Erie tracks between Cleveland and Youngstown. This would reduce the distance between Pittsburgh and Cleveland, via the B. & O., and give that road an opportunity to make better time and consequently get more business.

Coal Shipments Improving.

For the week ending with June 18 the shipments of soft coal on the Pennsylvania railroad and its allied lines showed up with an increase of 67,151 tons over the previous week. There was a slight falling off in hard coal shipments. The soft coal shipments were 500,393 tons; coke shipments, 141,868 tons; anthracite, 104,857 tons. For the year ending June 18 the total movement amounted to 18,420,025 tons, against 19,035,097 tons for the same period of the previous year.

Railroad Notes.

H. J. Booth, traffic manager of the Wheeling & Lake Erie, is in the city conferring with local Wabash officials.

Between Big Pool, Cherry Run and Cumberland there are now 3,000 men at work on the Western Maryland extension.

Oscar G. Murray, president of the Baltimore & Ohio, accompanied by George F. Randolph, first vice president; G. L. Potter, third vice president, and Lucius Beebe, private secretary to President Daniel Willard, arrived in Pittsburgh last night on their private car.

C. S. Sims, general manager; C. S. Wight, freight traffic manager; D. D. Carothers, chief engineer; J. B. Dickson, engineer of maintenance of way, and J. D. Pinkerton, general eastern agent, started to make an inspection of the local terminals, being escorted through the territory by W. C. Loree, general superintendent, and B. W. Duer, superintendent. Most of the officials registered at the Hotel Schenley last evening. They will spend the day here and then go to Virginia points this morning. The trip is being made for the purpose of examining the subsidiary properties.

WHEAT TAKES ANOTHER TUMBLE AT CHICAGO

[By Associated Press to The Gazette.]

CHICAGO, June 23.—Bearish reports from the northwest and southwest regarding the condition of the wheat crop brought out sufficient realizing sales of wheat today to cause a slight loss at the close, September being down ¼c. Corn and oats are unchanged. Provisions are up 2½@10c. When trading began in the wheat pit there were several factors of a bullish character in evidence, the most prominent being higher cables and reports of unfavorable weather in Argentine. There was a fair general demand at the start and the market opened quite firm, initial quotations on July being unchanged to a shade higher at 84⅝c to 84¾@85c. September was unchanged at 79⅞c. During the early part of the session offerings were light, resulting in a still firmer tone. A decline of 25 per cent in primary receipts, compared with a year ago, was an influential factor in giving encouragment to the bull element. A big storm in Hungary inflicted severe damage to crops and was another incentive to buy wheat.

The world's shipments of wheat was as advance to 85½c in July and 80¼c in September. As the session progressed numerous messages were received from the southwest, referring to the increasing amount of new wheat being delivered in country stations and the excellence of its quality and heaviness of yield, as claimed by the farmers. Reports from the northwest also were favorable and a private crop report showed a fair improvement in the condition of the crop. Toward the end of the session these bearish influences overcame the effect of the early bull factors and for the remainder of the day the market was subjected to considerable selling pressure. The demand was not equal to the supply and in consequence a weak undertone developed, July selling off to 84⅝c. September declined to 79¾c. The close on both September and July was at the low point. Clearances of wheat and flour were equal to 40,000 bushels. Primary receipts were 213,900 bushels, compared with 290,300 bushels a year ago. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 153 cars, against 256 cars last week and 209 cars a year ago.

Immediately after the opening an urgent demand from the shorts for July corn caused a slight flurry in the market for that cereal, forcing the price of July nearly a cent above yesterday's closing figure. On the advance offerings were quite liberal, resulting in a reaction. Firm cables and small primary receipts were bull factors. The market closed steady, with July ¼c lower at 48⅝c, after selling between 48¾c and 49¾c. September opened a shade to ⅛@¼c higher at 45⅝c to 48¾c, sold between 48⅛c and 49c and closed at 48½@48⅝c. Local receipts were 218 cars, 16 of contract grade.

Influenced by a bearish private crop report, the oats market displayed a weak undertone. Estimated small receipts for tomorrow and the early strength of wheat helped to steady the market, July closing ⅛@¼c lower at 38⅝@38¾c. September opened unchanged to a shade higher at 32@32⅛c, sold between 31¾@32c and 32¼c, and closed at 32c. Local receipts were 109 cars.

Provisions were firm on moderate support from packers. The principal demand was for ribs. The strength of the hog market helped provisions. September pork closed 10c higher at $13 20. Lard was up 2½@5c at $7 17½. Ribs were up 5@7½c at $7 07½@7 70.

Estimated receipts for tomorrow: Wheat, 9 cars; corn, 305 cars; oats, 67 cars; hogs, 20,000 head.

CUNNING SCHEME TO GET CONTROL

Citizens Leaders Discuss a Plan to Make $7,000,000 Bond Money Go Far.

CITY ITSELF MAY DO THE WORK

One of the greatest schemes ever conceived to control the political destiny of Pittsburgh has been discussed by the leaders of the Citizens party within the last few days, one which, they think, may give them absolute control of the city for years to come, incidentally enabling them to swallow the Republican organization. The plan is not to let the filtration and hump removal improvements by contract, but to do the work on the day-labor plan. The control of the city payroll and of most of the county payroll would then be a small matter, for with $5,000,000 to spend among the workingmen of Pittsburgh, it is figured, it would keep opponents of the present administration on the jump to make any headway at all in city politics.

It is true that the Citizens leaders on Wednesday finally decided not to put up an opposition ticket to the Republicans this fall. It is also true that, as Murry A. Verner said, the bond issue was discussed, but the conference was not concerned about how to secure the popular vote in favor of the bond issues, but rather to decide upon a way to spend the money after the people have voted for the bond issues.

Legal Points Considered.

The question of legality was gone into thoroughly. Some held that at least the spirit of the law contemplated that all work should be let by contract. It was pointed that there was room for much doubt, on that point, but that at any rate councils by ordinance could permit the director of the department of public works to hire the labor and have the work done. Quite recently Director McIlvain obtained from Allegheny councils authority to do $30,000 worth of street repaving and repairing, and quite lately the city of Pittsburgh established an asphalt street repairing plant. If Director McIlvain can do $30,000 worth of work and the city of Pittsburgh can do its own street repairing, why, it was asked, could not Pittsburgh do $5,000,000 of work without letting it by contract, the principle involved being the same?

The material must be obtained through the letting of contracts was admitted, and materials include stone, pipes, structural steel work for the covers of filter beds, and many other things. But the bond issues, if carried at the coming special election, will net $7,000,000 and of this amount, it is estimated, not more than $2,000,000 at the utmost would be spent for materials, leaving $5,000,000 to be paid for the masons, teamsters, bricklayers, structural iron workers, pipe fitters, many other kinds of craftsmen and laborers by the hundreds, and in political campaign times, by the thousands.

It was decided that neither the city charter nor the Wallace act regulating the government of second-class cities, specifies that work must be let by contract. True, the charter forbids the letting of more than $250 worth of work without advertising for bids, but it is asserted that nowhere does it state that the city itself may not do the work itself.

It was pointed out that the contracting firm stirred by the administration might feel disgruntled at the decision not to let the work by contract, but what does the displeasure of a contracting firm amount to for the leaders who have in their hands the distribution of $5,000,000 among citizens of Pittsburgh? It was pointed out by one of the conferees, it is said, that all the labor unions would indorse the proposal to have the work done on the day-labor plan, for men who work for the city receive union wages, while, if the work is let by contract, the employment by the contractors of union labor cannot be enforced.

It is figured by the schemers that if the work is done by the department of public works Republican ward leaders will tumble over themselves seeking favor of the administration, to secure employment for as many of their friends as possible.

The special committee of the chamber of commerce on the removal of the hump met yesterday in executive session, and prepared their report, which will be presented at a special meeting of the chamber this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.

INFANT PRODIGY SEEKS TO PREACH TO CROWDS

Colored Lad, 10 Years Old, Tells Remarkable Story of a Spiritual Vision He Beheld While on a Sick Bed.

With all the assurance and dignity of a venerable minister, Walter Wallace Edwards, a colored lad of 10 years, walked into the office of Police Superintendent Campbell of Allegheny yesterday afternoon and asked for a permit to preach on the street corners.

"I am a minister of the Gospel, and was called upon by God to preach His Word to the common people," asserted the boy, bravely. "I was preaching in Federal street on Monday night, when one of your officers stopped me and said I must get a permit."

The boy is of striking appearance. Rather small for his age, he has the head and facial expression of one of mature years. Through a pair of thick, gold-rimmed glasses a pair of bright, honest eyes looked straight into the face of Superintendent Campbell. The latter directed the Rev. Edwards, as the lad calls himself, to the office of Director Scandrett of the public safety department. As he found no one in the office, the boy said he would return in the morning. Questions put to the boy brought replies that are somewhat remarkable.

"I was called upon to preach the Gospel some months ago," he said. "Although I have never attended school, I have been a close student of the Bible since I was 5 years old. Several months ago typhoid fever prostrated me, and the doctors despaired of my life. It was then I had a vision. Angels gathered about my bed and suddenly I was commanded by a voice to 'go forth and preach the Gospel.' Soon I had recovered from my illness, and since hearing that voice I have been converted.

"My father and mother are willing that I should devote my life to Christ, and that is my intention. In the fall my parents will send me to school to prepare me for the ministry. But were I never to go to school I would be a preacher. The power to think and talk is not in me until I am in a crowd and start to speak. Then it seems that God inspires me with knowledge and His words pour forth from my lips. My days and nights are spent mostly in studying the Bible, and I am never so happy as when trying to lead sinners to Christ."

This diminutive minister preached several weeks ago in the John Wesley African Methodist Episcopal chapel, in Arthur street, Pittsburgh, and is regarded as a wonderful type of the infant prodigy. The boy's parents live at 916 Western avenue, Allegheny. His father, George Wallace Edwards, is a barber in Park way, Allegheny.

TAMMANY TO DIG PENNSY'S DITCH

GOOD JOBS FOR FAITHFUL

Herald Building, Herald Square.
NEW YORK, June 23.

The awarding of the digging of the big crosstown tunnel for the Pennsylvania railroad in this city to the New York Trucking and Construction Company means 8,000 jobs for the Tammany faithful. Many men will be put to work on July 1, and there is not a Tammany district leader in the city who is not "looking out" for at least 100 of his faithful.

Of course, the positions will not be sinecures, as the contractors are going ahead on a purely business basis and hope to make a big profit out of the $5,000,000 they are to receive for the stupendous task of excavating the tunnel.

The time-keepers' jobs, the tallymen's jobs and the office staff jobs will be worth the having. Then there will be foremen of gangs and rock drillers and engineers for the hoisting engines and other good paying berths for the Tammany adherent who really wants to earn an honest dollar.

The first shovelful will be taken out at Seventh avenue and Thirty-second street, in which section the railroad company has been busy buying up all the property and tearing down the houses to make way for the tunnel operations and the great station that is to be built.

Across the town from the North to the East river, the tunnel will be dug out by Murphy & Gaffney, and it means a big undertaking. The job will last two years. The digging will proceed to the depth of forty feet, and for a considerable part of the route rock will be encountered.

How Tammany comes to profit by the advent of the Pennsylvania railroad into Manhattan is a story with which only a few on the inside are quite familiar, but everything is said to be perfectly straight, although Tammany would not have got the job had she not been so all-powerful politically. The railroad people a year ago would not stand for the hold-up of their franchise by the board of aldermen, saying that the work in sight was ample inducement for Tammany to withdraw all obstructive measures.

The concern has for its officers John Murphy, a brother of the Tammany leader, and James Gaffney, who is a Murphy alderman.

FRIEND FAINTED WHEN MARK CRAHAN CONFESSED

Providence Counterfeiter's Admittance Came as a Surprise to All.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS TO THE GAZETTE.]

ST. LOUIS, MO., June 23.—Marcus Crahan of Providence, R. I., who was arrested two weeks ago at Delmar race track with counterfeit bills on his person, today confessed to Chief Wilkie of the federal secret service, and was indicted by the federal grand jury on the charge of counterfeiting.

Crahan's confession and indictment followed in rapid succession upon the visit of the Washington operative, and came as such a surprise that Crahan's friend, W. C. Dart, fainted in the secret service office shortly after learning the truth.

Crahan also surrendered $12,400 of the bad money to Chief Wilkie in $100 bills, making nearly $26,000 recovered all told. "Crahan confessed to me voluntarily," said Chief Wilkie. "He admitted that he made the notes himself, and also admitted that he had begun counterfeiting by making $10 'Buffalo' bills which he afterward abandoned.

"He also voluntarily surrendered 124 hundred dollar bills which he had in a small grip he checked at Union station the morning of June 4 after he arrived. He admitted that he made the bills in the east. Just where I do not care to say."

CAMPAIGN OPENED IN FIGHT AGAINST PARKS

Sabbath Association Appoints a Committee to Select Agent. Will Employ Attorney.

The executive committee of the newly organized Allegheny County Sabbath association met in the parlors of the Central Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon and organized by electing the Rev. J. T. McCrory chairman and the Rev. E. C. Lane secretary of the committee. Eight of the 21 committeemen were present. The Revs. J. T. McCrory, Dr. S. A. Hunter, Dr. John Weidley, R. C. Wiley, C. L. Thurgood, E. C. Lane, W. F. Slade and Layman Nathan Jones.

While much discussion of plans of action was indulged in, it was agreed to take first steps against the parks, as this alleged violation of the Sabbath law was a seasonable issue and other violations would have consideration at a more convenient time. A committee of three, consisting of the Revs. J. T. McCrory, C. L. Thurgood and Dr. S. A. Hunter, were appointed to decide upon an agent to carry on the work and to report at the next meeting, at which time an attorney to act for the association will also be chosen. Two members of the executive committee tendered their resignations because of pressure of business. These were Congressman William H. Graham and W. E. Lincoln. The resignations were accepted and W. E. Dusenberry and Dr. Cadwallader Evans were elected in their stead. The secretary was instructed to inform the ministerial associations next Monday that the committee should like to have at least half of the promised $1,000 in order to take immediate action.

The next meeting of the committee will be held in the Central Y. M. C. A. building at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon.
